Lehman Asks Lawmakers To Aid N. Y. C. Finances

In Special Session of Legislature Called Today Governor Asks Laws To Help New York City and Other Cities in Financial Difficulty—Refuses To Allow State To Collect Taxes To Be Turned Over to Cities—Plans Unemployment Relief To March 4, 1934.

State Capitol, Albany, N. Y., July 26 (AP)—Governor Herbert H. Lehman today asked the New York Legislature, in extraordinary session to help New York city out of its financial troubles, to pass laws permitting New York and every other city in the state to levy new taxes for unemployment relief up to March 4, 1934. The governor flatly refuses, however, to approve the New York city administration's plans for raising new unemployment relief funds through new taxes to be collected by the state and turned over to the cities.

At the same time the governor made a strong plea for economy in local government and recommended that the legislature empower him to appoint a financial agent to limit the expenditures of public money in any municipality which has defaulted in its obligations. A plan of this sort is in effect in Massachusetts and other states.

Mr. Lehman refused to approve the New York city plan on the ground that the raising of money by the state and turning it over to municipalities encourages "extravagance and wastefulness." New York city had suggested doubling the one per cent sales tax and stock transfer tax.

"It becomes much easier and more expedient,' the governor said, "for municipal officials to come to the legislature for help than to strive for retrenchment in the expense of local government. It eliminates the power of local public opinion, and it is largely through the force of public opinion that progress in government will come."

Nearly a score of upstate cities had joined New York in asking the state to provide them money for unemployment relief aside from what they are getting under the temporary emergency relief plan (40 per cent of whatever they spend) but none of them made specific proposals like New York's. They asked merely for a "certain and continuous revenue" for relief.

The governor said in his message to the legislators, which he merely transmitted to the senate and assembly instead of reading it in person, that he will make other recommendations for new laws as the special session progresses. One of these would propose new laws which will prohibit the "compounding of the felony," in kidnaping cases by paying for the release of persons kidnaped and in addition would strengthen the penalty, now from 10 to 50 years' imprisonment. Another would give the State Alcoholic Beverage Control Board now administering the state beer law, control over hard liquor in the event of the repeal of the 18th Amendment before the next regular session of the legislature in January.

SEVEN KILLED AS U. S. ARMY AIRPLANE CRASHES

Oceanside, Cal., July 26 (AP)—Twisted metal from a broken wing turned the cockpit of a twin-motored army amphibian plane into a death trap for seven men.

The wing, sheering off inexplicably at 1,000 feet elevation yesterday, soared away independent of the main body of the wreckage, but investigating officers said today it apparently closed escape hatches in such a manner that the crew of the giant bomber was prevented from leaping with their parachutes with a chance for life.

These killed were:

Second Lieutenant Carl H. Murray, of Filer, Idaho, pilot, who was attached to headquarters of the 17th Group, March Field, Riverside, Cal.

Sergeant Archie W. Snodgrass, San Antonio, Texas, of the 64th Squadron.

Sergeant Bonnell L. Herrick, Warsaw, Ind., 95th Squadron.

Private Walter T. Taylor, Los Angeles, 95th Squadron.

Private Stanley Book, Detroit, 95th Squadron.

Private Albert Overend, Coronado, Cal., 95th Squadron.

Private Vincenzo Galdin, Grand Rapids, Mich., 95th Squadron.

The bodies were taken from Oceanside to San Diego to await a military investigation beginning today.

MANY COMMUNISTS ARRESTED IN GERMANY

Berlin, July 26 (AP).—The authorities announced today that yesterday's nation-wide police raids resulted in the arrest of many Communists and in the confiscation of large quantities of weapons, explosives and subversive literature.

Trains were searched by the secret police, and railway passengers were required to identify themselves. Similar action was taken in regard to vehicles in country roads and automobiles in the cities.

Kidnaper Caught By State Troopers

Catskill, N. Y., July 26 (AP)—Frank Early, who was released from Great Meadow prison three weeks ago, was turned over to Putnam county authorities today on a charge of kidnaping Miss Edia Neumogen, of Lake Mahopac.

While Miss Neumogen was driving her automobile through Peekskill, yesterday, a man climbed into the front seat when she stopped for a traffic light. He was armed. About a mile out of Garrison the intruder forced the young woman to leave the car and march into the woods, where he bound and left her. Within a half hour Miss Neumogen had freed herself. She telephoned State Troopers a good description of the man and the car.

Shortly afterwards, troopers on duty here halted the car and driver, who proved to be Early. He had a hitch-hiking companion who described himself as Myer Davis, 27, of Middle Village, L. I. He was held as a material witness.

Troopers said that Miss Neumogen's watch was found in Early's possession.

President Declares His Plan a Success

Washington, July 26 (AP).—President Roosevelt today declared the industrial recovery program for shorter working hours and higher wages to be a success.

Meeting with reporters at the White House while pledges of support continued to arrive, he based his judgment on 12,000 replies already received from every section to his appeal to put a new charter for American industry into immediate effect.

Meanwhile, at the hard working industrial recovery administration hearings progressed on individual wage and working time codes for the oil, lumber and men's clothing industries.

Mr. Roosevelt was described as convinced that the "new deal" of a shorter working week and higher wages will go into effect almost immediately in the vast majority of industries.

AIMEE DOUBTS SHE AND HUTTON WILL MAKE UP

Baltimore, July 26 (AP).—Doubt that David Hutton will seriously attempt a reconciliation with his wife, Aimee Semple McPherson Hutton, was expressed by members of her party when she arrived in Baltimore today on her return from Europe.

Her attorney, Willedd Andrews, who accompanied her on the liner City of Havre from Norfolk, Va., said it was a "trick" of Hutton's attorneys.

Aimee said nothing but nodded her assent.

Another member of the party expressed the opinion that it was a case of "the Greeks bearing gifts."

WOMAN PLOTTER IN SLAYING GETS 14 YEARS.

Chicago, July 26 (AP).—Fourteen years in prison.

Mrs. Vera Carl, 37, the woman in the "fortune teller" slaying of her husband, George, heard a jury pronounce this judgment upon her on a charge of conspiring to murder her spouse, and then fainted.

She was carried from the court room of Judge Rudolph Desort last night—unconscious—after a jury had taken a trifle less than three hours to find her guilty.

Herzog To Support President's Plans

Employes of the Herzog Hardware & Paint Co. will on Monday go on a 40 hour a week basis, according to a statement made by M. H. Herzog, president of the company, this morning.

Mr. Herzog said that he was planning for 100 per cent cooperation with the President in his national recovery proposition and will try the 40 hour week schedule at least for the four months' period suggested, beginning August 1 and running to December.

The new schedule will mean the addition, probably, of two men to the present force, but according to Mr. Herzog will result in no reduction in regular salaries as at present paid.

Razing of Delaware Avenue Dwelling Is Ordered by Board

House of Nels Peterson Must Be Improved or Torn Down in 20 Days, Board of Public Works Rules—Number of Other Matters Considered.

At the regular meeting of the board of public works in the city hall Tuesday night road building, sewers, the razing of Nels Peterson's dwelling at 613 Delaware avenue and several other matters were taken up. Those at the meeting were Acting Mayor Conrad J. Heiselman, presiding; Commissioners E. Frank Flanagan, Henry Forst and Louis N. Stock; Fire Chief Joseph L. Murphy, Scott Van Keuren, superintendent of streets, and Arthur F. Hallinan, city engineer.

In the case of the property of Nels Peterson, the dwelling having been termed unfit for occupancy, the matter was referred to Corporation Counsel Chris Flanagan and Superintendent of Streets Van Keuren. Mr. Flanagan was asked to prepare the proper papers asking Mr. Peterson to either improve his building or tear it down within 20 days. Mr. Van Keuren's procedure will be to raze the building in case the owner does not and then charge the cost against him.

Chief Murphy was called to the meeting to pass on the Peterson building. He classified it as unsafe for occupancy, but said he had no authority to condemn it. The building is outside the fire zone and its present dilapidated condition is the result of no attention concerning its upkeep, not because of fire.

Superintendent Van Keuren was ordered to place "no noise" signs in the vicinity of the Orthmann sanitarium on Washington avenue. They likely will be put on the corner of Washington avenue and Pearl street and on the corner of Washington avenue and Lucas avenue.

The Franklin Street A. M. E. Zion Church was granted the use of Forsyth Park for its annual picnic on Labor Day.

Petition Received.

A petition was received from approximately 20 residents of Downs street, asking that the board of public works refrain from cutting off or trimming branches of trees said to hinder the view of motorists, making the railroad signal at the railroad crossing invisible.

The petition asked that instead of cutting the trees to lower the red light signals.

Acting Mayor Heiselman said he believed that sufficient limbs had been removed from the trees already and also that lowering the signals would be against the laws of the Public Service Commission which has fixed the height at which the red lights should stand.

It was also stated at the meeting that residents along the tracks of the Rip Van Winkle Branch of the New York Central Railroad, formerly the Ulster & Delaware, have complained about incessant bell ringing and too much blowing of train whistles. Mayor Heiselman said he had taken the matter up with railroad officials who promised to have the situation remedied.

In Newburgh there is an ordinance against blowing train whistles, Mayor Heiselman said, and the same can be adopted here by the common council if necessary.

Engineer Arthur F. Hallinan was complimented by the board on the new signs directing motorists to various outside villages. The matter of removing some of the signs from the corner of Washington avenue and Pearl street was also discussed and Superintendent Van Keuren diected to look after the matter.

The board voted in favor of communicating with Commissioner M. H. Herzog of the Work Relief Committee, asking him to complete the job of top-dressing Roosevelt avenue. The street is in good condition now, but the material used if not covered with another dressing likely will not last as long as it should. A representative of the concern which sold the material used to fix the street said he would refuse to guarantee it if top dressing was not used.

Prospects of the city finishing the job in case the Work Relief looks unfavorably on the matter are very slim. The highway appropriation in Mayor Carey's budget was $65,000. Of that amount $39,257.16 had been used to June 30. The balance is $25,742.84. This will be necessary to keep in shape the various streets that need attention.

Payrolls for street maintenance, given as examples to show how much is being spent for labor on streets, were read as follows: May 16 to 31, $2,760; June 1 to 15, $3,200; July 1 to 15, $2,360.

Commissioner Herzog, besides receiving the communication concerning the finishing of Roosevelt avenue, will be reminded again of the wading pool which has been promised for Cornell Park. The board of public works was unanimous in expressing that the children of the Sixth, Seventh and Eighth wards were as much entitled to a pool as those of the other sections of the city where they have them.

Flooded Cellars.

Engineer Hallinan reported he had investigated the situation in the Wilbur section where residents complained about their cellars being flooded because water used by the Wilbur Sand Company to wash sand had seeped through the ground and into their houses. He said the water instead of being allowed to lie on

Special Program at Fair For 2,000 New York State Farmers

Chicago, July 26 (AP).—A special program was arranged for today at the World's Fair in honor of the New York Farm Bureau Federation of which 2,000 members and their families are here in a body.

Today was originally designated as New York day at a Century of Progress international exposition, but the date has been changed to September 8 because the governor, Governor Herbert H. Lehman, will be unable to attend until then on account of a special legislative session.

Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, has been selected as the principal speaker on the program to be held in the court of the hall of states outside the door of the Empire State's official exhibit.

Charles R. White of Ionia, N. Y., president of the New York Farm Bureau Federation, and Col. Robert Isham Randolph, representing the World's Fair, have also been scheduled to speak. Greeting will be extended from Governor Lehman.

The New York 4-H Band, composed of 50 farm boys and girls, will give a concert.

The arrival of the New York farmers has swelled attendance in the New York exhibit to record figures. It is anticipated that by closing time 50,000 persons today will have viewed the display, an estimate of yesterday's visitors in the Empire State exhibit was 42,000, the largest since the fair opened.

Because of the varied and extensive development of New York city and the state, it was decided, Miss Santina Seone of Rochester, a custodian, explained, that it would be too tremendous a task to give each phase representation, and that therefore the emphasis would be placed on the scenic beauty to be found in the state.

Thus the exhibit is a display of photographic murals and transparent pictures, taking their themes from the charm of a pastoral setting. The lure of a forest ravine, the sweeping lines of a sky-scraper and the symmetry of machine wheels.

The most effective of these are the sixteen foot high photo-murals that paper the upper part of the side walls. The work of Edward Steichen of New York, they are believed to be the world's biggest photographic enlargements.

Those on one side portray sections of the Adirondacks and the Letchworth State Parks and a scene with cattle grazing. Beneath the latter is the statement that New York leads the nation in butter production. On the opposite side a view of Lake George, part of 4,000,000 acres of forest preserve, is flanked by a mural of the State Education Building in Albany, and a picture of George Washington Bridge between New York and New Jersey, the world's longest suspension span.

Toward the rear are two panoramas, the work of the late Joseph Urban, noted architect and stage designer, who devised the color scheme of the World's Fair.

One panorama, a view of New York's skyscraper skyline glimpsed through huge girders, represents man-power. The other, a section of Niagara Falls seen beyond a reproduction of water-washed rocks, bespeaks natural power. Outdoors a bit of the Adirondack State Park has been transplanted. Here growing in native New York soil are shrubs, ferns and trees. It is authentic down to a woodpile. But the brook that babbles through is Lake Michigan water.

The exhibit was designed by Eugene Schoen of New York, architect.

Deliver Food Orders To Needy Families

Funds Are At a Low Level and Every Cent Available Must Be Made Go to People Who Are Deserving of Help.

The Home Relief office through the staff of the central investigation office began this week to deliver food orders to the homes of the families on the Home Relief list. This is done as an economic measure, as the funds for both home and work relief are at a low level and every cent available must be made to go to the people who are deserving of help. The bureaus cannot pay taxes, cannot pay back rent, back grocery bills, etc.—they can only furnish the minimum amount of help and this must go only to those in the direst need. Those who have members of the family working, those who pick up odd jobs that bring in an income, those who can afford to run cars, attend movies, buy luxuries, etc., are in this time of stress not fit recipients of the city's charity.

Investigators have been instructed to return the food order to the office if for any reason they believe the family not eligible for relief. Immediately a re-investigation will be made and this will be along regular case-work and not "relief" methods. Every member of the family will be interviewed and birth records checked. Relatives, parents, sisters, brothers, uncles, aunts, will be interviewed. Social agencies in towns where children or other relatives live will be asked to see them and report their condition to the Kingston office. Social agencies of the state, county and city working in Kingston and private relief agencies of Kingston will be checked for their knowledge and experience with the family. Landlords and former landlords will be seen. Storekeepers of the neighborhood, clergymen, school teachers and others will be interviewed.

All orders this week have been dated Thursday, July 27. This is order that the Friday sales may be taken advantage of. If a family has regularly been receiving a food order on days before Thursday, that is on Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday, the order has been increased to cover the period between that day and Thursday and a notation that a certain amount of the order may be filled before Thursday. Those whose orders were given on Friday or Saturday received a reduced order as a new one will be given Thursday, August 3. The orders delivered this week must last until Thursday, August 3.

Grocerymen are warned that if they anticipate orders they do so at their own risk. Those filled on a date before that called for will not be honored by the City Welfare Department. Those allowing families more than the order calls for do so on their own responsibility and no redress will be forthcoming from the city. If grocers allow families on relief to have other things than the city schedules call for, such as cash, cigarettes, candy, etc., these items will be deducted from the bill.

Treasury Receipts.

Washington, July 26 (AP).—Treasury receipts for July 24 were $7,424,437.56; expenditures, $17,758,484.83; balance, $826,748,459.48. Customs duties for 24 days of July were $18,392,244.70.

Post Gets Acclaim And Tribute Today

New York, July 26, (AP).—Wiley Post rode through New York's canon of acclaim today to receive the plaudits of thousands and the traditional ticker tape tribute for his latest flight around the world.

From the battery to city hall he rode along lower Broadway through just such a crowd as he and Harold Gatty were greeted by two years ago after their world flight.

From office windows towering high above the narrow street thousands of clerks and stenographers looked down to cheer and toss out rolls of ticket tape to make the paper blizzard which New York casts on all its heroes.

Police estimated the Battery crowd at approximately 20,000 and the street was lined with watchers all the way to City Hall Park where another great crowd waited.

Twelve hundred uniformed police lined Broadway to keep the path clear for the Post parade.

Post, the only man to fly around the world alone and fastest ever to circle the globe, rode in an open car and several times rose to his feet to wave and bow to the cheering crowds.

Mrs. Post with several companions rode in the second car and behind that was a long string of other automobiles bearing notables of aviation, including Clarence Chamberlin and Roger Q. Williams, and city officials.

Because of the injuries suffered in their crack-up at Bridgeport, Conn., Captain James Mollison and his wife, Amy Johnson, transatlantic fliers, were unable to be present. Their physician dressed their wounds at their hotel today and said that they would be ready for any ceremonies planned after Friday.

At city hall Mayor John P. O'Brien told Post that his "conquests of the globe have become a symbol of man's triumphs over the elements."

The mayor presented Post with a gold medal, specially cast, "in honor of a valorous deed well done and of a brave, skillful and resourceful pioneer in aviation."

PRESIDENT TO RECEIVE POST THIS AFTERNOON.

Washington, July 26 (AP).—President Roosevelt will receive Wiley Post, the round the world flier, at the White House today at 5 o'clock.

Air Armada Reaches Shoal Harbor on Trip

Shoal Harbor, N. F., July 26 (AP).—The Italian air armada completed the third leg of its homeward flight today, by 11:48 A. M. E. S. T. Ten of General Italo Balbo's seaplanes had alighted on Shoal Harbor and others of the squadron were circling overhead.

The leading plane dropped down on the water at 11:40 a. m. and the others soon followed.

The armada had completed in about five hours the hop from Shedias, N. B. Enroute one plane, the Jarovi, commanded by Captain Rovis, was forced down for repairs at Victoria Harbor.

Minister to Austria.

Washington, July 26 (AP).—President Roosevelt today named George H. Earle, third, of Philadelphia, to be minister to Austria.

Local Industries to Support President's New Plan If Feasible

Many Merchants Waiting For Definite Information Before Taking Action—What Some Local Industries Propose To Do.

An attitude of "watchful waiting" on the part of Kingston business, merchants and industries, has followed the appeal of President Roosevelt for support of his huge project to increase employment through a minimum wage scale for each business and a work week of not more than 35 hours for industry and 40 hours for white collar workers. This attitude has developed more from a lack of understanding as to the President's plan than from any desire on the part of the employer to thwart a return to prosperity. No one seems to know just what the President has in mind, how he plans to make his program effective, how industry will stand an increase in wages and shorter working hours, and who will stand the difference in expense to industry. Much of the doubt will be cleared when each industry adopts a code of fair dealing, which is a part of the plan.

Tomorrow 5,000,000 agreement blanks will be laid on employers' desks, asking volunteer pledges of higher wages and shorter working hours, and just what the result will be is hard to say. These blanks are temporary, being only effective until each industry adopts a code, at which time a permanent agreement will be reached, it is hoped by the administration. A number of large industries all over the country have telegraphed the president that they are with him, but few have signified any specific intentions.

The following local industries have been queried concerning their plans and what they propose to do:

Central Hudson Gas and Electric Corporation—Plans under discussion, waiting for information and forms.

Katterman and Mitchell Silk Company—Went on new schedule a week ago, using two shifts, but employing no additional men.

Kingston Dry Dock and Construction Company—Plan to cooperate when more is known about the project. Washington wants 32 hour week, shipyards want 40. If 32 hour is adopted, it would mean practically two men for every job, and consequently less pay for each individual.

Montgomery Ward & Company—Manager Tweedie has heard nothing about plans, but home office is working on the project.

Apollo Magneto—Know nothing definite yet about plans.

Fessenden Shirt Company—Working on plan. A 40 hour week would put on more machines. Company is busy adding persons to its staff daily. Change might add 100 to 150 employes.

Forst Packing Company—Will follow code adopted by American Meat Packers' Association. A 40 hour week would put on a few more men in the manufacturing department. Have been increasing their force since April, and have in the neighborhood of 175 on their payroll at the present time.

Schilling Furniture Company—Waiting for reports. Furniture business and lumber code somewhat interwoven, with lumber code not yet settled. If 40 hour week is adopted, would mean about 20 per cent increase in number of men employed.

A number of other concerns were queried, some having no statement to make and at others the employer was not present to make a statement.

Considerable dissension was expressed at a number of places concerning the administration plan. At one business place it was stated that a minimum wage and 40 hour week if enforced would be a death blow to the exceptional worker, making it impossible for a firm to pay him a deserved higher wage, because less competent employes would have to receive a minimum wage and thus take what was deservedly his opportunity for pay increase. At another place it was stated that a number of people long in the employ of the firm would be dismissed if a minimum wage were adopted, because they were unable to produce enough work to deserve such a wage.

A number of local industries stated that if their staffs were increased it would be necessary to reduce wages, just the opposite from what the President hopes to accomplish. Most all of those queried wanted to know how they were going to raise wages, take on more men and meet expenses.

All of the Kingston industries are willing to cooperate but they want to be sure that the plans will mean an increase in income if they are expected to increase their expenses.

County Auto Dealers' Association Formed, Adopt Code of Fair Dealing

Adoption of Code Expected To Assist In Used Car Problem and Unfair Practices Which Exist in Trade-in System—Twenty-Six Dealers Join—The Code Adopted By The Newly Formed Association.

Forty automobile dealers of Ulster county, representing thirty retail concerns, met at the city court chambers in the city hall Tuesday evening and formed a county-wide automobile dealers' association which in turn adopted a code of fair dealing which will be submitted for consideration to the federal administrator of the National Recovery Act. The code adopted by the local organization is the same one which has the approval of the Empire State Dealers' Association and which is also advocated by the National Automobile Dealers' Association.

The meeting held Tuesday evening was called by the Kingston Automotive Dealers' Association following a conference held last week in Albany and which was attended by A. H. Chambers and R. M. Sutliff as representatives of the city association. At Albany the National Recovery plan was thoroughly talked over and a suggested code was presented and at that time it was suggested that local associations meet and adopt a code or in the event there was no county organization that one be formed in order that the matter could be presented for consideration of all dealers. As a result the meeting was called for Tuesday evening.

A. H. Chambers, president of the Kingston association, presided and Roy M. Sutliff explained the National Recovery Act of President Roosevelt as it related to the automobile retail sales. Mr. Sutliff stated that at Albany a code of ethics had been adopted at the meeting called by the Empire State Dealers' Association. This code would be submitted to the administration as a code which the dealers would like to have adopted. If approved it will become a law and all dealers will have to live up to it. While drawn in brief the essence of the law is contained therein but details for enforcing the code and the matter of fixing hours and wages will later be added after a study of the entire industry has been made. One thing which Mr. Sutliff stressed was the fact that some code was to be adopted and made a law to govern the dealers and the dealers felt that they might rather adopt a code which would be acceptable to them and submit it for approval rather than have a code written by someone outside the business and have it forced upon the automobile dealers.

In any event he said there would be a code of ethics approved and every dealer would have to stand by it or be punished for violations. The purpose is to eliminate unfair business practices and permit dealers to operate on a profitable business basis to the end that they may increase the wage of their help and employ more men.

Working on Dealer Code.

The N. A. D. A. has been asked to submit a dealer code and is at present working on it. The code adopted by the local organization last night will be incorporated in the code submitted by N. A. D. A., together with details which the skeleton code presented last night does not cover.

One of the things which it is expected the adoption of a code will do for all dealers is assist in the used car problem and the unfair practices which now exist in the present trade-in system. Regulation of prices allowed for used cars will be set within reasonable bounds so that dealers will not be able to make unfair allowances in order to make a sale. A maximum price, regulated by actual sales, will be set on used cars and a dealer will not be able to allow more than the maximum price set for that particular make or model of car. The annual losses to dealers in the country is estimated at $50,000,000 a year now as a result of "competitive bidding" for used cars by many dealers who in order to make a sale or prevent another dealer from making a sale will allow far in excess of the market value of a used car.

Under the Recovery Act New York state will become a zone which will be made up of four districts. One district will be New York and Long Island, the second district with headquarters at Albany will include territory along the river from Westchester to Canada and west to join the Syracuse district which will be made up of central New York. The fourth district will be the Buffalo or west district. Each district will have a central committee or board of directors made up of one representative from each county organization and this committee will meet with Empire State men at the district headquarters and this committee will regulate the used car maximum allowances according to sales made in the district from time to time.

It was explained that the formation of an association was desirable. When and if a code is adopted and becomes a law everyone whether a member of an association or not will become subject to the provisions of the act and by becoming a member of an association now he may have some word in the code to be adopted or in other words may assist in mak-

John Cotter and sister, Miss Cotter, spent Wednesday in Highland on business.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Ose and Miss Larkin of Poughkeepsie, were callers at the homes of relatives here on Sunday evening.

The showers which arrived in this section on Monday evening were well received. Many persons were caught in the rain and drenched but were so pleased to receive the rain that no one minded it.

Charles Thorne and son, Melvin, were business callers in Ardonia Thursday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. George Boettinger entertained Mrs. George Doenges and children and Mrs. Charles Fleischman from Springfield Gardens, Long Island, and Mr. and Mrs. John Hamilton of Paterson, N. J., at their home here the past week.

Rise and Fall of Mining

Mining camps experience periods of growth and decline, of excitement and obsolescence, depending upon such economic factors. Leadville, Colo., is an example of the changes wrought by the varying composition of its ores. Starting out as a gold camp, it became a silver camp, and subsequently, with depth, deteriorated into a lead and copper producing district.

Panama Hats From Ecuador

Panama hats are really made in Ecuador and to impress this on the world letters sent abroad by the Ecuadorean postal service are stamped with rubber stamps in the language of the country of destination with a legend to that effect.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By The Associated Press)

Paulsboro, N. J., July 26—The girl who took her clothes off but didn't go in the water thereby saved the life of the girl who went swimming without removing anything, much less hanging it on a hickory limb.

Miss Stephanie Bogutt, 17, one of a group which lost an oarlock from their boat in the Delaware river, plunged fully clad into the water to go for help. The distance was too great. While Harry Goodwin tried to keep the struggling girl afloat, Olga Strumelack, also 17, waved her dress as a distress signal and a tug boat came from shore to make the rescue.

Ticket For Black Maria

Atlanta, Ga.—Driver O. J. Stanley of Fulton county's "Black Maria" opened his siren and throttle on his way to court.

City officers, conducting a traffic campaign, gave him a ticket for running a red light and reckless driving.

Growing Gray Matter

New York—Dr. Walter B. Scaife, a philosopher from California, says that state will soon produce super-brains. He says the California climate will improve the intelligence just as it perfects the human body and that mental giants will result.

Ex-Sergeant, Maybe.

Danville, Ky.—Holder of at least the local record for long distance shouting, Lee Chrisman, a farmer and auctioneer, has arranged a demonstration of his vocal prowess on an island in Herrington Lake near here. His audience, on shore, will judge his ability. Several months ago Chrisman was reported to have shouted so loud from the top of a high hill that he was heard six and one-half miles away.

Dog Wags Tail, Boy Dies.

Greenville, Pa.—The wagging tail of a shepherd dog knocked over a shotgun in the Stephen Zec farm home, discharging the gun and killing Stephen, 14, leaving 10 brothers and sisters of an original 17.

A Stab in the Dark.

New York—Frederick Martin, a newspaper vendor who is blind, was stabbed in the abdomen. Police held a suspect without bail after Martin identified him by his voice.

Soles Found Chinese.

Seattle—Rubber retreads for Chinese coolies and soldiers will move out of here next week when the freighter Grays Harbor lifts a shipment of used automobile tires for North China. The old casings are made up into shoes.

Blood.

Chicago—Blood is what Kenneth Stahl, 6, needed, but not just any kind. He needed the type that would help a boy who had just suffered successive attacks of mumps, chicken pox, and scarlet fever.

But Frank Stahl, his father, jobless, said he couldn't pay for a professional blood giver.

A newspaper sent out an appeal. About fifty men and women volunteered. But the person selected was 5 year old Harold Frost, who recently recovered from scarlet fever.

Kenneth is getting well.

More Education.

Joliet, Ill.—Richard Loeb, who is serving a life sentence for the slaying of Bobbie Franks, is extending his activities as an educator.

Loeb, who is conducting correspondence courses in higher education for prisoners, is getting new students in the old state prison. Heretofore the courses were confined to the newer of Illinois' twin penitentiaries.

First Jersey Cow Registered

The first Jersey cow registered in the United States was Lily I. She was brought to the United States and received her official designation as registered Jersey cow No. 1 in 1868. The one millionth Jersey cow in the United States has since been registered. There are about 355,000 head of registered Jersey cattle on farms.

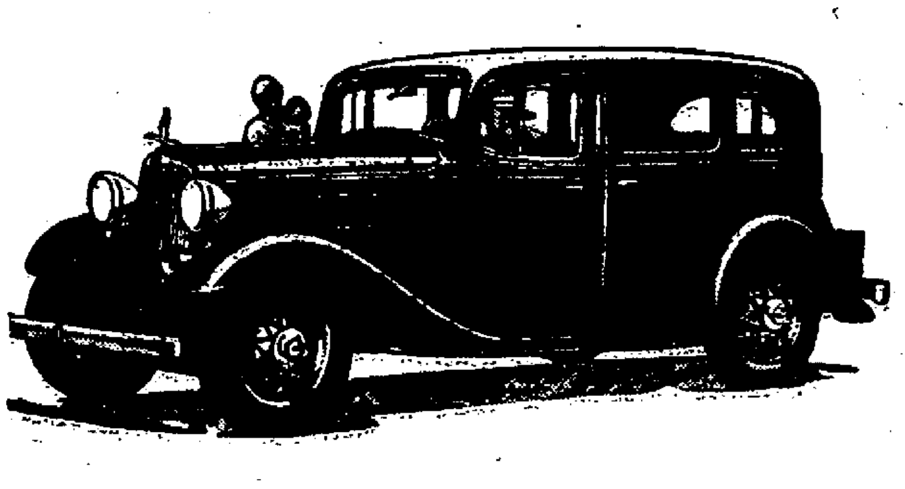
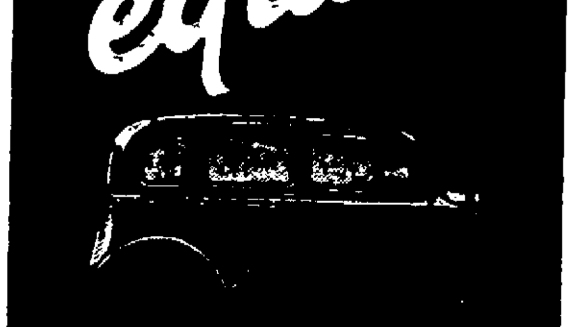
STEEL ALONE IS NOT ENOUGH!

—neither strong enough, nor safe enough, nor quiet enough for the body of a quality car like CHEVROLET



STEEL BODY plus HARDWOOD REINFORCEMENT equals



STRONG, SAFE BODY BY FISHER

CHEVROLET There is only one type of body construction which Chevrolet will permit on the chassis of the cars it builds: That's the type which every test—and every experiment—and every experience has proved to be the safest, strongest, and best. Not steel alone, because steel alone is not enough. But a Fisher body of steel reinforced by hardwood! The same kind of construction used on practically all the highest-priced cars in America.

Chevrolet well knows that steel alone has one distinct advantage: it's cheaper. Steel also is strong—up to a certain point. BUT—beyond that point, steel alone will bend and crumple under severe stress or shock. It takes the strength and supporting solidity of a hardwood reinforcement to give you the full protection and full satisfaction you want in a motor car body today.

If you're thinking of buying a new low-priced car, better watch this matter of bodies, and watch it carefully. Insist on steel reinforced by hardwood! Fortunately, the only low-priced car with this preferred type of body is also the only car with a proven valve-in-head six; with Fisher Ventilation; Cushion-Balanced Power; a Starterator. That car is Chevrolet—America's most economical automobile.

MORE GARDENING.

Many cities report more "garden-mindedness" than usual this year. Flower gardens, encouraged by garden clubs, grow steadily in popularity, and converts to this charming pastime when once gained are seldom lost. Vegetable gardens are appreciated more as food prices rise. One thing the business depression has been good for is its stimulation of gardening. For millions this has been a recreation in forced leisure or a source of needed food. Regaining contact with Mother Earth is always good, and in such times as we have been passing through it has helped both minds and bodies.

The lesson will hardly be lost, now that the economic strain begins to ease. With the shorter work days made necessary by industrial efficiency, there is going to be more leisure for amateur gardening than civilized man has ever had. There should be, accordingly, new demands for garden space, larger and pleasanter yards, more people wanting individual homes complete in themselves with indoor and outdoor facilities. At least, this prospect seems logical. We shall soon see.

THE BALBO BEARD.

General Balbo, the Italian air fleet commander, made such a hit with Chicagoans that observers reported an immediate trend toward the wearing of Balbo beards by the young men of the Windy City. The style will spread, too, if it gets a good start in Chicago. Every section of the country was interested in the Italian air armada. There were pictures of the handsome young general and his fellow-flyers in every paper. The Italian-American population was fairly overcome with pride in his achievement. Americans who can imitate him in no other way will gladly copy his whiskers.

Barbers should not be distressed at this. Says one of them: "Fortunately the Balbo beard isn't a conception of the unkempt growth from the land of the tall and uncut. It's a manly beard, full-fledged, but not trailing or scraggly. It needs to be kept trim, immaculately brushed, combed, nourished by expert whisker engineers and aggressively curled—just a touch of a wave." If that doesn't spell work for the barbers, what does? Let the Balbo beard come on. It may be one of the additional boosts the recovery is expected to need occasionally.

GAMBLING FUNDS

In connection with the stock market stampede, it is announced that during the second week of July brokers' loans gained $100,000,000, reaching a total of more than a billion. This is small compared with the $6,000,000,000 and $7,000,000,000 levels for such loans in the mad bull year of 1929, but rather large for the present financial situation of the country.

For most of this money there are surely better uses. Much of it, no doubt, comes to New York from other parts of the country. At the present rate, additional billions will soon be drawn there, to the disadvantage of scores of communities suffering, themselves, for lack of capital. It would be far better for the average American community, and in the long run for the metropolis itself, if these gambling funds were turned to constructive use at home. Perhaps we can assume that the Federal Reserve System, which tolerated the diversion of so much of the country's capital to Wall Street during the last boom, will find means to control the movement this time.

LUMINOUS ROAD SIGNS

A Memphis man has been in Chicago showing his system of illuminated highway markers to traffic experts and engineers. They are constructed on the principle of the "stop" signs at railroad crossings and dangerous intersections which are automatically illuminated at night when the headlights of approaching cars shine on the red glass of the signs.

These markers, however, would indicate directions, curves, routes, and so on, in addition to giving warning of traffic dangers. They are made of metal, with illuminators or lenses of different colored glass. The signs themselves will be five or six feet high, easily seen by day or night. They will reproduce the exact layout of the road ahead, "S" curves, railroad crossings, road intersections, left or right turns, and all the rest. Their designer claims they can be made for half the cost of present directing and warning signs. They sound like a great improvement over present markers, their 24-hour visibility being only one of their special advantages. A change in road marking systems has been needed for some time. Something of this sort may represent the next step.

SALT AND SKIN AILMENTS

In 1931 European research workers found that various skin ailments became much worse when considerable table salt was eaten with meals, or if salted foods were eaten.

When patients with eczema and urticaria (hives) were kept off salt foods and salt itself for a number of days, and then were given large doses of table salt by mouth, they nearly always showed a great increase in their symptoms; in fact the itching usually became unbearable.

Now salt is a necessary article of food because the taste demands it, and the tissues of the body all need salt.

Accordingly a means was sought that would remove the effects of the sodium in salt (salt is made up of sodium and chloride).

Drs. John Jordan Eller and Charles Robert Rein tell us in the New York State Journal of Medicine that the sodium in table salt is what causes the skin irritation and that it can be rendered perfectly harmless by bringing it into close relativity with certain other substances such as potassium, calcium and magnesium.

The resulting mixture was found to closely resemble in its action the liquid part of the blood.

Despite the fact that the mixture had considerable sodium in it, it did not increase the symptoms of the skin ailments, when given in large doses by the mouth. This mixture apparently overcame the great sensitiveness of the patient towards ordinary table salt.

Research workers claim favorable results with the usual foods rich in vitamins and minerals, salted with this mixture in a variety of skin ailments such as hives, eczema, acne vulgaris (pimples), tuberculosis of the skin and others. When we remember that it is the vitamin rich foods and ordinary salty foods that usually increase skin symptoms, the value of this special salt is apparent.

The great difficulty in carrying out such a diet lies in the fact that the patients must be under strict supervision as to their diet, and this often means remaining in hospital.

The big lesson here then is that in many skin ailments foods are chiefly responsible for the itching and irritation, particularly salty foods, and using too much table salt with foods.

By omitting these foods from the diet or using but small quantities, the skin irritation may be lessened or may disappear entirely.

Talks to parents

The Right Toys

By BROOKE PETERS CHURCH

The question of children's toys might seem very simple to answer in this day of mechanical development, but actually it offers very serious problems to the thinking parent.

There are certain toys which, for want of a better term, might be called natural, and which have stood the test of time. Many hold that to supply the child with these is probably all that is essential.

Among these are dolls, of course, but simple dolls, not grotesque nor so naturalistic as to intrude their personality upon the child, and not so large as to be unwieldy.

Blocks also are important, and, if possible, these should be simply stone or wooden shapes that can be built into a thousand forms, according to the child's fancy and not to a set pattern.

A collection of blocks with a large wooden box on casters to hold them proved for one family of children the foundation of innumerable games, and sometimes the structures had to be left standing for some days while an especially absorbing series of events took place about a fort or castle.

Balls, of course, must be included, though their use is somewhat limited. And last, but not least, pencils, paper, crayons, scissors and later on paint boxes. These toys can be as crude as you like; for the child rarely considers the toy in itself, but the creature that his imagination makes of it.

This creation of his fancy varies according to his mood and spiritual needs. Dolls can be as changeable as real people; blocks can build a house, or a city or a fairy palace; pencils and paper can produce a world of beauty.

Out of these inanimate objects a child creates the world in which he lives, and this world will to some extent influence his future.

The HIDDEN DOOR

BY FRANK L. PACKARD

Synopsis: Reddy Turner, crook, asks Colin Hewitt, mystery writer and boyhood friend as well, to deliver a mysterious letter for him should Reddy be put on the spot. Reddy tells Colin he is the only man he can trust; also that the letter is hidden in his room, inside a curtain pole. Colin asks that Reddy explain why he is fearful of his life and in front of a coal fire in Colin's comfortable quarters on an old street, just off Washington Square, New York, Reddy begins his sad tale.

Chapter Three

UNDERLYING TRAGEDY

REDDY'S voice was suddenly flat. "She was still only a kid of course when you left the old town, because she was nearly six years younger than I am, but I guess you remember my sister Annie, don't you?"

Colin nodded uneasily. He did not like the note that had crept into Reddy's voice.

"Annie!" he said. "Rather! I've toted her around a hundred times on the handles of my bicycle, and all the while she'd sing like a little lark. She was a great youngster. I suppose she was about eleven or twelve when I finally left the town. She was a good little pal of mine—after you went away, Reddy. We both missed you a lot. What has made you mention her tonight?"

"I know who drove the car when Pete was bumped off."

"She's part of the story I'm going to tell you," Reddy answered with a crooked smile. Her body was fished out of the river here six months after French Pete, that we were talking about, was put on the spot. That's why French Pete was bumped off—Annie had been married to him about a week before."

"I don't think I quite understand," Colin said heavily.

"Somebody else wanted her." Reddy laughed unpleasantly. "French Pete was in the way, that's all."

Colin's hand dropped to his side and clenched.

"My God!" he exclaimed hoarsely. "Go on!"

"French Pete was a pal of mine." Reddy's voice was flat again. "That's how Annie came to know him. He was a French Canadian, and his name was Mireau—Pierre Mireau. He was in the beer racket, and he wasn't any church-goer, but he was straight as a string with Annie. You see, after the mother and father died I kept Annie going in a little flat here, and, between stretches, I used to live with her.

"She wasn't for Pete's racket, and a whole lot less for mine, but she stuck to me through the years like a brick, and what any good woman could do to shove us both back on the straight and narrow, she did. She loved Pete and Pete loved her, understand that.

REDDY paused abruptly, strode over to the decanter, hesitated an instant, and then came back.

"No," he said. "I'll wait till I'm through. I was in stir when Annie got married. But even the walls where I was don't keep out the news. You know that. The night that Pete was bumped off, Annie disappeared. I got the low-down on it. She was kidnaped. And I couldn't get out. Six months later she was found in the river and identified as Mrs. Pierre Mireau, the wife of French Pete, who had been put on the spot."

"I remember reading about that," said Colin hoarsely. "It was front-page stuff, but the name, of course, meant nothing to me."

"No," Reddy said; "of course it wouldn't."

"And then?" Colin prompted through tight lips.

"You said something about Annie being pretty when she was a child." Reddy's lips were working now. "Some of them don't grow up that way. Annie did. When she married Pete there wasn't anything in town that could touch her. And she was straight! There was only one way that swine could get her.

"I got out two months ago, and Annie's been dead nearly five now. I don't know whether that's the way he got rid of her when he got tired of her, or perhaps found out that she'd got to know too much, or whether she managed to escape and, crazy with it all, did it herself; but it was murder either way."

Reddy laughed again—it was a jangling, discordant sound. "That's why I can't leave New York. That's the 'job' I was talking about. I'll get the man who did it—or he'll get me. That's why I've got my fingers crossed on what may happen at any time to me, because I know what I'm up against."

Reddy paused and circled his lips with the tip of his tongue.

"THE police didn't get anywhere," he went on. "Anyway, it isn't a police job—it's mine."

"The code, of course," Colin nodded in understanding. "Well?"

"I know who drove the car the night Pete was bumped off, and I know who the two guys were that made a sieve of him with sawed-off shotguns, but there's no hurry about them. Their turn will come—but they're still useful. It's the big noise they work for that I'm after."

"You know who he is?" Colin's voice was husky.

"If I knew who he was," Reddy stated evenly, "he wouldn't be alive tonight. No; I'm not sure yet. But I've gone a long way. Listen! Your 'master minds' and 'super crooks' are jokes compared with the one I'm talking about. He swings a mob in every racket there is, from dope and beer and booze to white-slave stuff, with a little murder organization kept on tap to round everything out. Each mob is separate, and no one in any of them knows who the big shot is that they get their orders from. They call him the Mask—that's all they know about him."

"You mean he always wears a mask?"

Reddy smiled with grim tolerance.

"Oh, no!" he said. "He leaves that sort of thing to you writers. And yet he is always masked—from the soles of his shoes to the hat he wears, if you get what I mean. He can assume a dozen different characters—and does. Hence the name. No one yet has ever identified him in his real person."

"Do you know any of his lieutenants?"

"Yes." I've been working now for two months, but it was only a few days ago that I began to pick up his trail. Tonight I'm lying low, waiting for a little something I'm counting on to break my way—and, if it does, I'll have him. That's all."

JULY RECITAL AT HOME OF MRS. MARY MOODY

New Paltz, July 26—The July recital of Mrs. Mary Moody was held at her home on Monday evening. The program began with a piano solo, "Morning Salute," by Gurlitt, played by Faith Mack. Piano solo, Grieg's Elfentanz, Winifred Nelson. "Barcarolle", from the Tales of Hoffman, Grace Mautersiock. The junior program closed with Margaret Kevan playing, "Marche Facile", by Rummel. A number of the junior pupils were absent. A piano duet opened the senior program, "Minuet", by Diabelli, Frances Brown and Mrs. Moody. Vocal solo, "Old Folks at Home," Kenneth Hasbrouck. Vocal solo, "The Mission of a Rose," by Cowen, Louise Fleury. "Day Is Dying in the West", by Speaks, Albert Dodd. Refreshments and additional numbers were enjoyed.

SAMSONVILLE

Samsonville, July 26—Deputy Sheriff and Mrs. John Darling delightfully entertained Mrs. M. Sanford, Mrs. L. Markle, Mrs. George Bush and Mrs. Thomas Bashall all of Kingston at their home, Valley View Farm, Thursday, July 20. Lunch was served on the shady porch. After lunch the ladies drove about the neighborhood visiting old friends including Mrs. Ida G. Steen of Glen Springs Farm, Mrs. Steen's daughter, Mrs. Harold R. Wilson of St. Louis and Mrs. Katherine Boice. All voted the vicinity of old High Point a wonderful place in which to spend the day.

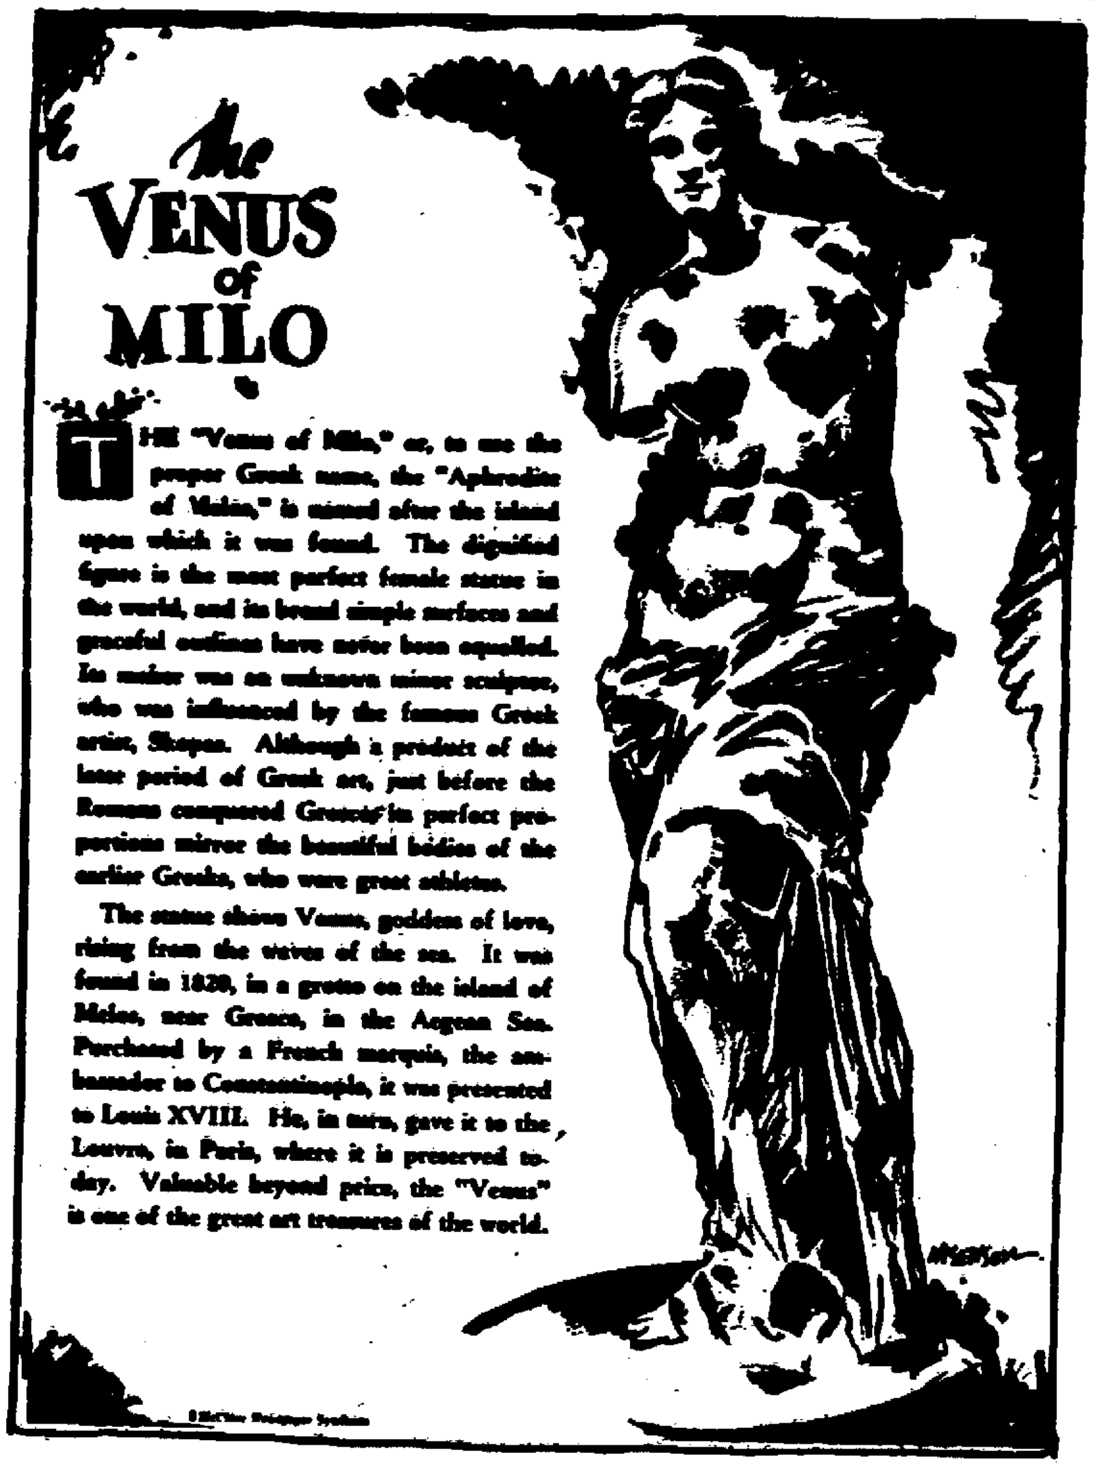
Mr. and Mrs. Porter and Miss Lucy Biel of Allentown, Pa., were guests at the home of Mrs. Steen, Monday.

A large congregation assembled at the church Sunday evening, but no preacher arrived. The Rev. Mr. Edwards of Pine Hill was expected to deliver the sermon and the people were disappointed at not hearing him.

Mrs. Jennie Myers is spending some time with her daughter, Mrs. Warren Edgar, in New Hamburg, on the Hudson.

STROKES OF GENIUS

by SAMUEL NISENSON & ALFRED PARKER



The VENUS of MILO

THE "Venus of Milo," or, to use the proper Greek name, the "Aphrodite of Melos," is named after the island upon which it was found. The dignified figure is the most perfect female statue in the world, and its broad simple surfaces and graceful outlines have never been equalled. Its maker was an unknown minor sculptor, who was influenced by the famous Greek artist, Skopas. Although a product of the later period of Greek art, just before the Romans conquered Greece, its perfect proportions mirror the beautiful bodies of the earlier Greeks, who were great athletes.

The statue shows Venus, goddess of love, rising from the waves of the sea. It was found in 1820, in a grotto on the island of Melos, near Greece, in the Aegean Sea. Purchased by a French marquis, the ambassador to Constantinople, it was presented to Louis XVIII. He, in turn, gave it to the Louvre, in Paris, where it is preserved today. Valuable beyond price, the "Venus" is one of the great art treasures of the world.

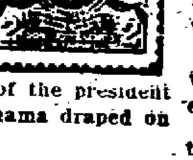
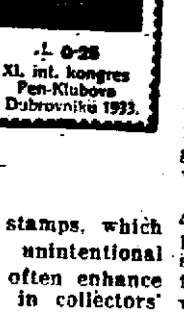
The WORLD of STAMPS

By QUINTON JAMES.

Panama is paying tribute to its first president, Manuel Amador Guerrero, who served from 1904 to 1908 and who died in 1909, by issuing a two-centesimo stamp on the occasion of the hundredth anniversary of his birth. The stamp, in red, contains a portrait of the president with the flag of Panama draped on either side.



A special issue by Jugoslavia in connection with the international congress of the Pen Club, composed of poets, editors and novelists, has just become available. There are six stamps in the set with the reason for their issue printed on a tab below the stamp proper, which shows King Alexander.



Two More Errors.

It's the errors in stamps, which sometimes creep in, unintentional or otherwise, that often enhance the value of stamps in collectors' albums.

Just at present two such instanc have come to light, one involving current United States issue and t other a recent Cuban issue.

It was the eagle eye of P. Ward, Jr., of Philadelphia that l cated three copies of a two-ce U. S. stamped envelope printed the green of the one-cent sta rather than the red of the tw center. Collectors say this err may make the stamped envelop worth around $100 apiece.

Ward said that "500 of the e velopes apparently were printed error."

The other mistake occurred the recently issued 3-centavo Cub commemorative, the error bei found only in one stamp on a pri ed sheet of 100. The normal sta shows two large mango trees wi a wooded background containi four palms. In the error the tw center palms of the group of fo are missing.

What's Happening.

Special souvenir imperfora sheets of Century of Progre stamps will go on sale August 25 connection with the convention the American Philatelic Society Chicago. The sheets will conta 25 stamps each of both the one-ce green and the three-cent purple, a will be ungummed.

A new German series, showi scenes from Wagner's operas, is preparation. There will be eig stamps in the set. The stamps a to sell for a few cents over fa value, the extra proceeds going various patriotic funds in German

POLITICS at Random

By BYRON PRICE
(Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington)

THERE are so many wheels within wheels in the Roosevelt administration, and they all are revolving so rapidly, that it is no wonder visitors to official Washington often go away completely bewildered.

No other President ever surrounded himself with so complicated a set-up. When you speak of the "inner circle" nowadays you have to designate which inner circle you mean.

There is the regular cabinet. There is the circle of administrators and coordinators, some more powerful than any cabinet member. There is the "brain trust," composed of 20 college professor officials. There is the political inner circle, which includes Postmaster General Farley and Secretary Howe.

Every one of these groups has a special claim to the confidential ear of the President. Not one seems certain what any other is doing. Many crossed wires are inevitable. Washington is as full of rumors as the army was in wartime—which is saying a great deal.

The Welter Of Rumors

Treasury Secretary Woodin's continued absence—he went away June 15—has inspired reports that the way is being prepared for his retirement.

His stay in New York is attributed to illness. Stories he disagrees with Mr. Roosevelt's financial policies (many of which originated with the "brain trust") are officially denied, but they persist.

There are many guesses as to what State Secretary Hull will do when he returns from the London economic conference. Private reports of what happened there during the visit of Assistant Secretary Raymond Moley are beginning to reach the White House, and, sooner or later, Washington is expecting developments in the situation between the secretary and the "brain trust" dean who technically is his subordinate.

Nor has the sensitive pulse of official speculation failed to respond to such developments as the extraordinary role assumed recently by Bernard M. Baruch, or the designation of Frank Walker as a sort of coordinator of coordinators—called by some "assistant President."

The Inside Track

The general impression around the capital is that if anybody really has the inside track it is the professors.

That impression has been deepened by the President's failure to consult oftener with party wheelhorses, most of whom don't show much liking for the professors.

It was many weeks after election before Albert C. Ritchie heard a word from the President-elect. Since election night Mr. Roosevelt has had no communication with Alfred E. Smith, unless it has taken place very recently.

Yet the presidential veto of Professor Moley's London stabilization scheme demonstrates that the President by no means thinks the brain trust infallible. Accumulating evidence indicates he reserves the right to make his own decisions.

It is an old trait of Mr. Roosevelt to keep people guessing. He made a game of it when he selected his cabinet, not only with the newspaper reporters but with those immediately involved. Even Farley has told friends he was not invited into the cabinet until just before inauguration.

So there can be little doubt that the present guessing game is something more than mere accident; or that the President is enjoying it immensely.

A Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER

WASHINGTON—When Hugh Gibson, generally rated one of the most experienced career diplomats in the government, was shifted from Brussels to Brazil by President Roosevelt rather early in his administration, it struck some Washington observers as a bit odd.

HUGH GIBSON

Gibson's long years of experience with the problem of disarmament, at a time when it seemed that the Roosevelt administration was setting out with high hopes to get somewhere in the disarmament field, appeared indispensable.

Ever since President Harding called the world disarmament conference in Washington back in 1921, Hugh Gibson has been looked upon as a sort of walking textbook on this subject.

The Thick Of Things

He laid the groundwork for the three-power conference during the Coolidge administration. And it was through Gibson, speaking at the League of Nations disarmament gathering at Geneva, that President Hoover made the gesture which resulted in the London naval arms conference.

Friends of Gibson, however, say that he was not surprised at his shift from Europe. For one thing, he was such a republican stalwart—he is an intimate friend of his fellow Californian, Herbert Hoover—that he hardly could have expected preferment under a democratic administration.

And then, too, President Roosevelt's appointment of Norman H. Davis as ambassador-at-large in all European countries, the commission carrying with it many of the duties Gibson had hitherto assumed, left him shorn of certain points of his accustomed portfolio.

But there's another angle to Gibson's transfer from the capitals of Europe to South America.

A Trade Move?

Diplomatic and trade circles in Washington are now looking upon Gibson's appointment to Rio de Janeiro as a significant move in the Roosevelt administration's intention to do all possible in recapturing for the United States' export trade the once lucrative markets of South America.

Since he is well schooled in the statecraft and trade-practices of this country's commercial rivals, the possibility of concluding with Brazil an agreement for reciprocal trade favors to build up commerce between the two great national entities of North and South America may be Gibson's mission at Rio.

NEW PALTZ

New Paltz, July 26—On Tuesday afternoon of the past week, the Rev. Frank Wilson of Hyde Park, a former rector of St. Andrews Church, New Paltz, called on friends in town.

Mrs. Vanderburgh has been visiting her sister, Miss Frances Elting, in Saug Harbor.

Van Deusen, Superintendent of Fairmount Park Aquarium in Philadelphia. They also visited Valley Forge and Atlantic City.

Mrs. Schuyler Millham, Mrs. Virgil DeWitt of New Paltz, Mrs. Harvey DeWitt of Kerhonkson and Mrs. Foster of Long Island, enjoyed tea at the Shop in the Garden in Stone Ridge one day the past week.

Miss Myra Jackson of Grand Rapids, Michigan, motored to New Paltz, where she arrived at the home of her sister, Mrs. Edith Lundrup, on Friday to spend her summer vacation. Miss Jackson visited the World's Fair on the way.

Mrs. Stanley Ashton and her two daughters and Mrs. Burton Abrams, her niece of Ohioville, are visiting relatives in Amsterdam.

Daniel Lucy has sold his farm which is known as the Sol LeFevre place. Mr. Lucy has moved into his house on the Modena road near the place of Frost and McNabb.

Tips on CONTRACT

The bidding went: Lewis Osborn, South, one heart; West, one spade; North, two hearts; East, pass; South, four hearts.

When the dummy went down there seemed to be a strong possibility of losing a diamond and three clubs and thereby being set one.

But South eventually determined that by ducking on the lead of a club by East, he could take a trick with the club queen.

South then led to the spade king and ruffed a spade, East discarding a low club. It was then known that West held originally six spades and two hearts.

South crossed to dummy by a heart and led the three of diamonds, finessing the knave successfully. It was therefore certain that East held the king of diamonds. The ace of diamonds was led, followed by the deuce on which West followed, East capturing the trick with the king.

The play now had accounted for 11 cards of West's original holdings, six spades, two hearts and three diamonds. The fall of the 10 showed he had no more diamonds, and so it was obvious he had two clubs left. One of them must be the ace. He needed the ace to make an over-call of South's original heart bid, because his spade suit lacked the tops.

Leaders's King Marked.

East led the knave of clubs, and South knew all he wanted. East must be leading from the king-knave, believing South had the queen and would cover and enable West and East to take three club tricks.

South played the five spot instead of covering, and game was certain. West had to take the trick with the ace and return a club, making South's queen good and giving West and East only one diamond and two club tricks.

If West ducked the first club lead, he would have had to take the second and would have nothing to lead but a spade, which South could ruff in the North hand, discarding a losing club South.

The same result would came about should East lead the thirteenth diamond, instead of a club.

ST. REMY.

St. Remy, July 26.—The community picnic will take place on the church lawn Thursday evening, July 27. The cafeteria supper will be served from 6 o'clock on. The menu will include boiled ham, potato salad, baked beans, cabbage salad, tomatoes and lettuce, pickles, rolls, coffee and cake. There will be ice cream and all kinds of refreshments and games. Music will be furnished by the Cordts Hose Company Band. Everyone is invited to come and enjoy the evening.

The Ellsworth family attended the funeral of Henry Kneble in Brooklyn on Sunday.

Mrs. Martha Skinner of Jersey City is visiting friends in this place.

Walter Durham visited his father, Howard Durham, Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Cornelius of Rhinebeck were supper guests of the Ellsworth family Thursday night.

The service on Sunday afternoon was very pretty with the wintry scenery of ice and snow. The flowers frozen in the large cake of ice was very beautiful. The sermon by the pastor, the Rev. Mr. Goertz, was most interesting. S.

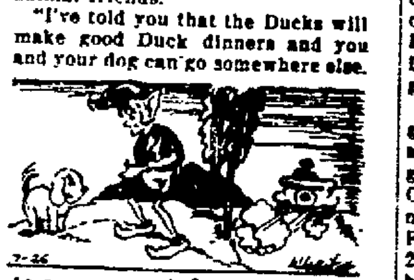
Rip Thinks Quickly

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

Rip came running back from a long walk and stood close to Willy Nilly, listening in surprise to what Willy Nilly and the stranger were saying.

"But you can't come in like this and take possession of Puddle Muddle and change it into a summer resort," Willy Nilly protested. "It belongs to me and I live here with my animal friends."

"I've told you that the Ducks will make good Duck dinners and you and your dog can go somewhere else.



As no one can find the person who owns the land, it will be sold at public auction and I will buy it for the plans I have in mind. Of course, I would get rid of the ruts and have the uneven ground smoothed and I would have some nice lawns and flower beds."

"The owner gave this land to me years ago. He told me I could have it. You can't come in here and do such a thing!" Willy Nilly insisted.

"The best thing you can do is to leave quietly. I'll give you time to pack up and get away," the stranger continued. "No one knows anything about the land having been given to you. I fear your case amounts to nothing.

"I have brought a tent with me in my automobile and I'm going to stay over so I will have plenty of time to draw up my plans. The auction will take place in a few days."

The stranger walked off and Rip turned to Willy Nilly.

"I have an idea. He doesn't know about the Bears. I must see what I can do at once," Rip barked, and started to leave.

Tomorrow—"Willy Nilly Worries"

STONE RIDGE.

Stone Ridge, July 26.—The Ladies' Aid Society of the M. E. Church will meet in the lecture room of the church today.

The Epworth League will be entertained at the parsonage Thursday evening, July 27, at 7 o'clock, standard time.

The chicken salad supper under the auspices of the Builders Guild and Home Missionary Society on July 20, was well attended. The supper was praised by all, and a good social time followed. Music was provided by a group of guests from the Edge Water Camp, under the leadership of Mrs. George Daly of Brooklyn. The sale of articles by the Mothers' Jewels, Junior missionary Society, netted $5.18. Receipts from the supper were upwards of $50. Hearty thanks is extended by both societies to all those who by their presence and in many ways contributed to the success of this endeavor.

The Atwood M. E. Church will hold an ice cream and cake social on Friday evening, July 28. The ice cream will be homemade, and the reputation of the homemade cakes of the community is enviable. The last social of the kind netted the church $24. It is hoped that even better results may be reported of this coming social. A cordial invitation is extended to all who enjoy a good time.

The next regular meeting of the Builders Guild will be held at the home of Mrs. Clifford Basten on Friday, August 4.

Plans Progress for Orange County Fair

Middletown, July 26 (Special)—Entries for the ninety-third annual Orange County Fair will open at the Chamber of Commerce building here July 21 and will close, for all classes except poultry and speed horses, Thursday, August 17. Poultry entries will close August 19.

Ulster county was well represented among the exhibits at the Orange County Fair last year particularly in the horse and cattle departments with horses from the Medium Security Prison among the winners and cattle from Shawangunk Valley Stock Farm, Bonny Brook Farm, Jesse Deyo's farm and Ulsterdorp Farm getting a large number of prizes.

The Fair will open Monday, August 21, and continue for six days and nights. Harness racing programs on the historic Harry Clay Oval are scheduled Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday of Fair Week and on Saturday, August 26, some of the foremost automobile speed drivers of the nation will compete in dirt track automobile racing events.

The Fair management expects its afternoon and evening entertainment program this year to excel any that has been shown in past years. A big revue which will require a special stage has been booked. Two large tents, in addition to the permanent facilities on the grounds, will be required for dressing rooms for the performers.

No whipping, no nursing . . . just a soft word, and your Terraplane will go through fire and water for you!

That's TERRAPLANING!

By letter, by wire, by word-of-mouth, Essex Terraplane owners have told us of experiences with their cars that have seemed even to us almost incredible until we learned the details.

Thousands of trouble-free high-speed miles, emergency high-gear runs over rocky mountain roads in record time, accidents prevented by Terraplane agility, trips through mud and sand in the dead of night.

. . . in every story a thrill, in every thrill the assurance of Terraplane ruggedness, dependability and safety.

Yet the Terraplane is a gentle car—quiet, smooth, comfortable, instantly responsive. It is an amazingly economical car. It is a beautiful, sleek, low-slung car. . . . Have you driven a Terraplane yet?

County Auto Dealers' Association Formed

ing the law which will eventually govern his business. The activities of the Empire State association and the N. A. D. A. was explained and all dealers were urged to join the state and national association. Annual dues are $35. Of this fund $25 is paid to the Empire State Dealers Association and that association from that fund will stand all expenses and costs of operation of the Recovery Act so far as meetings to fix used car prices, etc., are concerned. This fund will also cover the association's work in regulating new legislation which is presented at each annual session of the state legislature pertaining to the automobile business in the state. For years this state dealer association has been doing considerable work along that line. Also $5 will go to N. A. D. A. and $5 of the $35 annual dues will be used by the local association for operation. This plan for financing was suggested and later adopted by the meeting.

County Organization Formed

Abel Abernethy after the code had been explained moved that a county organization be formed to co-operate with the Empire State Dealers' Association and N. A. D. A. The motion was seconded by J. David Schenck and unanimously carried. This association is composed only of dealers in new cars and trucks in the county.

It was suggested that five directors be elected, one to become the member of the Albany board.

George J. Schryver moved that the association be called the Ulster County Automobile Dealers Association. Seconded by Abel Abernethy and carried.

Copies of the proposed code was handed out and an opportunity to ask questions was given. The code as proposed was approved by the meeting.

Twenty-six of the dealers attending the meeting joined and 12 immediately paid their dues. Others stated they would mail checks today.

Executive Committee

The following were named on the executive committee:

Gordon Jansen, Ellenville; Olof Sundstrom, Marlborough; Oscar Snyder, Saugerties; A. H. Chambers, Kingston and Roy M. Sutliff, Kingston. Later the executive committee met and organized as follows: R. M. Sutliff, chairman; A. H. Chambers, treasurer, and Monroe T. Southard, who is also secretary of the Kingston Automobile Dealers' Association, consented to act as secretary to the committee.

Present at the meeting was Q. H. Ball of Troy, president of the Empire State Dealers' Association. He explained the working of the proposed code and also told of the many ways in which the State Dealers' Association could be of assistance to dealers. He said that the retailing of automobiles had grown to be a highly competitive business and that unfair practices had crept into the business until now it was a tough business. Used car losses were mounting each year by reason of the unfair practice of excessive allowances by some dealers in their eagerness to make sales. Frequently sales were made upon which dealers lost money in their eagerness to prevent a competitor from selling a car. This he said would be regulated by the fair business code.

A. W. Whitehouse, wholesale manager for L. R. Mack, Inc., Albany Packard dealers, was also present and spoke. He said as soon as a suitable code was ready and adopted by the government it would cease to be a code and would become a Federal law when the President signed it. When that event took place the automobile dealers would have to take it whether they liked it or not and abide by it or be punished for violations. Bootleg dealers caught practicing unfair business would be subject to closing for 6 months and a fine of $500. He urged dealers to get behind an organization so that the organization might have weight when it made recommendations.

The Code Adopted.

The code adopted last night and which is sanctioned by the New York Dealers' Association and many other organizations, including Empire State Association, is:

"The retail motor vehicle industry hereby agrees on the approval of the president to immediately increase all wages or salaries 5%. Further, that the proprietors in the industry will seek to quickly increase wages to 1926 levels.

"To prevent sales without profit, heretofore due to unfair competition, which has caused the dissipation of a large part of the capital originally in this industry, and annual used motor vehicle losses estimated now at $[illegible], it is agreed that the retail motor vehicle industry will regulate itself in respect to this condition. Giving consideration to the public interest, the retail motor vehicle industry agrees to appraise used motor vehicles at the average price the public is paying for these motor vehicles in the then current market. The retail motor vehicle industry further agrees that it will allow in trade for such used motor vehicles not more than the above mentioned appraisal price less 20%.

"The retail motor vehicle industry further agrees to adhere to established new motor vehicle delivered prices agreed upon between manufacturers and dealers."

The meeting adjourned subject to call of the chair.

The Preller Murder Case

Stories of the Greatest Cases in the Career of Thomas Furlong, the Famous Railroad Detective, Told by Himself

Copyright by W. G. Chapman

The conviction of the murderer of Clarence Preller, a man named Hugh M. Brookes, was one of the hardest pieces of work ever performed by me. The true story, which I have never before disclosed, has a remarkable psychological interest, in that I kept my assistants in ignorance of the part that each was playing, while my own recompense consisted only in a contused eye and a number of scratches, bumps and bruises.

The Preller murder occurred in the summer of 1885, in one of the rooms of the Southern hotel, St. Louis. Clarence Preller was a young Englishman, representing important commercial interests. Brookes, the murderer, was also an Englishman, of respectable parentage, but a criminal past. However, until he met Preller on the steamship which conveyed them to America, his worst crime had been the theft of some property belonging to fellow-students at a law school.

Brookes, representing that he was a man of title, succeeded in ingratiating himself with Preller during the course of the voyage. They journeyed to Boston together, and Preller, who was en route for New Zealand, by way of San Francisco, proposed that they should reunite at St. Louis. Brookes, passing under the name of Maxwell, engaged a double room at the Southern hotel, and was there joined by Preller a day or two later.

Brookes, or Maxwell, had learned that Preller had in his possession seven one-hundred-dollar bills, and had already resolved to murder him. On the Sunday after the reunion, after dinner, Preller complained of stomach trouble. Maxwell, claiming to have some knowledge of medicine, administered a hypodermic injection of morphine, giving his victim enough to kill. Just as Preller was breathing his last the murderer poured a quantity of chloroform upon Preller's lips, completing his work. When the man who had trusted him was dead, Maxwell stripped the body and placed a suit of his own underwear on it. Maxwell was short in stature, being only about five feet five inches in height, while Preller was much larger, about six feet tall. Maxwell's clothing was marked with the name of Hugh M. Brookes, and his obvious design was to have it appear that he had committed suicide, or had been murdered, leaving the police to search for the dead man as the murderer.

Brookes emptied out the trunk belonging to Preller and thrust the body into it. Then, strapping and locking it, he put his own, as well as Preller's effects, into his own trunk and retired for the night.

The next morning he paid his bill, stating to the clerk that Preller had gone out of town for a few days, but would return shortly, and that he desired the room to be held for him, as his trunk and effects would remain there until he called for them. He added that he had to leave that morning, but expected to rejoin Preller later in another city.

Brookes had already made that fundamental error which all murderers seem to make. He planned to leave his own effects behind him and to ship the trunk containing the body to a distant place, where the dead man would simply be known by the marks on the underclothes. But he had given wrong instructions to the porter, or else the porter made a mistake, for the trunk brought down was his own and not that containing the body. Brookes became very much alarmed. He took a ticket for San Francisco, and thence sailed for Auckland, New Zealand, to which spot Preller had been bound, apparently still trying to carry out the substitution of identities.

The body was discovered, the detectives got on the trail of the murderer, and he was arrested on the arrival of his ship at Auckland and brought back to St. Louis. While in jail he employed two lawyers to defend him, and it was then that I came into the case.

A few days after Brookes had been lodged in jail Mr. Ashley C. Clover, circuit attorney of St. Louis, and his assistant, Marshall F. McDonald, drove out to my residence. I was then special agent for the Missouri Pacific Railroad company, and my visitors were well known to me.

"Furlong," said Mr. Clover, "it looks as though Brookes will go free."

"How is that?" I asked.

"Because," replied the other, "while there is scarcely any doubt that Maxwell caused the death of Preller by chloroform, yet he may have done it innocently, and if such is the case he could not be convicted of the murder. Now, Tom, I want you to get the facts in this case for me."

I asked for a day to think the matter over, to which suggestion they agreed. When my visitors returned I said:

"Gentlemen, I have been thinking about the case in question, and have become satisfied that there were but two persons who knew the whole facts connected with the case. One of these persons is now in jail, and the other is dead. In my opinion Maxwell is the only living person who knows the facts, and therefore he is the only person from whom these facts can be obtained. I believe I can get these facts from him. I shall be glad to do anything that I can to assist you in unraveling this case, with the understanding that I am not to receive any compensation for what I do myself, but I expect you gentlemen to pay the operative that I may use in this work the same amount of salary that we are paying him, and his actual expenses."

This being agreed, I telegraphed to Philadelphia for a man in my employ there named John McCulloch, a truthful, honest man, but a little thick-headed: just the man who would interpret his instructions to the letter, and carry them out in this way—which was what I wanted.

I began by obtaining possession of a few blank checks from the office of D. S. H. Smith, who was local treasurer of the Missouri Pacific Railroad company in St. Louis. My chief clerk was a good penman, and I set him to practice until he could not only imitate Doctor Smith's signature, but could imitate it just badly enough to arouse suspicion in the mind of a bank cashier. I next had my clerk fill out a blank check for the amount of $1,188.10. This check I gave to McCulloch, instructing him to present it to the paying teller of the Mechanics' bank, which was then on Fourth street. I had received a genuine check from Dr. Smith a few days before, and had purposely held this out, and was waiting across the street from the bank when McCulloch, who is now to be known as Frank Dingfelter, entered to cash the forged check. As soon as Dingfelter entered the bank I followed him.

The paying teller examined the check curiously, and then, seeing me, excitedly motioned to me to come to the window. As I approached, the teller, in an excited voice, commanded me to arrest Dingfelter. "He has presented a large fake check bearing the name of Dr. Smith, for nearly twelve hundred dollars," he said. "Why, you know Dr. Smith's signature."

"Yes. Here is one of Dr. Smith's checks," I answered. "I know this is genuine, for I saw the doctor sign it."

MAXWELL TURNED ASHEN PALE AND COLLAPSED.

The two checks were compared by me, and I continued:

"While I am not an expert on handwriting, I do not believe that Dr. Smith wrote that signature."

"Where did you get that check?" demanded the teller of Dingfelter.

"I got it from Dr. Smith," was the reply.

"Will you go with me and see Dr. Smith?" I asked.

"Well, I don't know whether I will or not," Dingfelter answered. "Are you an officer?"

"I am the chief special agent for the Missouri Pacific Railroad company," I replied.

"Oh, well, that is different. I will go with you and see Dr. Smith," said Dingfelter.

We started for Dr. Smith's office accordingly. At the corner of Sixth and Pine streets I gave Dingfelter the prearranged signal, which was for him to hit me a good, stiff punch in the face. A large, clumsy policeman, wearing a raincoat, was standing under an awning near the corner saloon. Dingfelter hit hard, as he had been instructed, and struck me above the eye, knocking me down and inflicting a severe contusion. Dingfelter stumbled and also fell, and the clumsy policeman made a dash for him. In the ensuing fight the policeman lost most of his uniform, and all three of us went down in the mud and were covered with filth before Dingfelter was finally subdued.

Dingfelter was taken to headquarters and searched. In an inside pocket was discovered a letter directed to some person in San Francisco, together with a large sum of money. The letter seemed to implicate the prisoner in a series of bank swindles which had excited the people of the Pacific coast. The newspapers had printed a good deal about this gang, and the St. Louis detectives felt that they were on the trail of the robbers. The afternoon newspapers censured and ridiculed me for having failed to discover this letter.

However, I was not disconcerted, for it had taken me about two hours to compose and write the same epistle.

The St. Louis papers devoted to Dingfelter a good deal of the space that they had been devoting to Maxwell, much to the disgust of the latter. The two men met in the "bull ring" in the jail, and Maxwell hastened to make the acquaintance of so notorious a swindler as Dingfelter seemed to be. The more the latter held himself aloof, the more anxious Maxwell appeared to be to cultivate his acquaintance.

"You are Dingfelter, I believe," said Maxwell.

Dingfelter replied that he was, and Maxwell continued:

"They seem to have a strong case against you."

"You will have to excuse me, sir," answered Dingfelter. "I don't want to seem impolite, but I must decline to talk to anyone in this place about my case, as you call it. I don't believe it would be a good thing for me or any other person to talk about a charge that is pending against him in a place of this kind. Besides, I don't know you."

"I am Maxwell," replied the other. "I am the fellow who is charged with the murder of that man Preller, who was killed in the Southern hotel, and whose body was found in a trunk. I was arrested at Auckland, New Zealand, and brought back here to St. Louis to stand trial, but I have been assured by my attorneys that I will be acquitted. They have no case against me, and just as soon as I can get a trial, why, of course I will go free."

"I have been reading in the papers about you," answered Dingfelter, "and if you will pardon me for saying so, it seems to me that you have already been talking too much about your case. If you are not guilty of the crime with which you stand charged you ought to be acquitted, and I hope you will be."

Dingfelter was in jail for forty-seven days, during which time Maxwell never let the opportunity pass without talking to him. Meanwhile Dingfelter was making daily reports to me. Maxwell, who seemed to have implicit confidence in Dingfelter, admitted that he had killed Preller to obtain the seven hundred dollars which the latter possessed.

Maxwell also told Dingfelter that he had used morphine, which had not hitherto been suspected, owing to the presence of the chloroform. The body was at once exhumed, and traces of morphine were found, the examining doctors guarding the secret faithfully until the trial.

After this information had been obtained from Maxwell it was unnecessary to keep Dingfelter in jail any longer, and it was accordingly arranged to have him released on bail. When Dingfelter told Maxwell that he was about to leave the prison he added that if there was any way in which he could assist him he would be glad to do so.

"You can do a whole lot for me," answered Maxwell, "by getting two of your friends to come here when my trial is called and have them testify that they met Preller and myself in Boston, and that they accompanied us to the depot when we were leaving Boston; that at the depot I proposed that the party take a parting drink; that Preller, these two men, and myself went to a cafe, and that when I paid I displayed a roll of seven one-hundred-dollar bills; that I explained that I wanted to change one of these bills so that I might have smaller bills with which to pay my expenses on my way to St. Louis. If they will testify to this it will account for the six one-hundred-dollar bills that I took from Preller."

"Are you sure that your lawyers will not get these friends of mine into trouble or let the police get next to them if I can get them to come?" asked Dingfelter.

Maxwell assured Dingfelter that his friends would be perfectly safe in coming to St. Louis, and that the police would not get next to them, provided, of course, that they were not already known to the police.

It was about five o'clock in the evening when Dingfelter was released from jail on bond, and at that hour the courts in the building had adjourned for the day, and the newspaper correspondents and all others had left the building except for the few attaches who were on duty. Thus Dingfelter left the jail unobserved. He took a circuitous route to my house, where he remained until a late hour, when I sent him to New York. I had instructed him to open a correspondence with Maxwell from that city, so as to get positive instructions from Maxwell as to what the witnesses were to testify to when they took the stand in his defense. He carried out these instructions to the letter. The correspondence was kept up through the medium of Maxwell's attorneys, copies of the letters sent, and the originals that came back, coming into my hands. When the trial was called Dingfelter, or McCulloch, as he may now be known again, returned to St. Louis, his presence there being unknown to anyone except myself and Messrs. Clover and McDonald.

At the trial Maxwell took the stand in his own defense and testified that he had administered chloroform to his friend Preller on the fatal evening at the Southern hotel, for the purpose of alleviating his pain. He saw fit to mention a certain disease as the cause of Preller's sufferings, whereupon a second autopsy was made, which showed conclusively that Maxwell's statement on this point was untrue.

Dingfelter was among the first witnesses to be called by the prosecution. After being duly sworn, he took his seat on the witness stand. Maxwell shot one glance at him, turned ashen pale, and collapsed. He hurriedly communicated to his attorneys the fact that he recognized Dingfelter, which caused consternation among the party for the defense. The following questions were then put by the assistant circuit attorney, Mr. Marshall F. McDonald, and were answered as follows:

Q. What is your name? A. John F. McCulloch.

Q. Where were you born? A. Wilmington, Del.

Q. How old are you? A. Thirty years.

Q. What is your business? A. Detective.

Q. By whom are you employed? A. Thomas Furlong.

Q. Do you know the defendant in this case (pointing to Maxwell)? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you first become acquainted with him? A. In the city jail.

Q. Were you a prisoner in the jail? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What were you charged with? A. I believe it was forgery.

Q. When and where were you arrested? A. I was arrested at the Mechanics' bank on the corner of Fourth and Pine streets, this city, by Thomas Furlong, who was afterwards assisted by a police officer, whose name I do not know.

Q. Why did Furlong arrest you? A. He was commanded to do so by the paying teller of the Mechanics' bank.

Q. Why did the teller cause your arrest? A. Because I had presented a check bearing what was purported to be the signature of D. S. H. Smith, local treasurer of the Missouri Pacific Railway company. The paying teller told Furlong, in my presence, that the signature was a forgery.

Q. Did you know it to be a forgery? A. I did not.

Q. Where did you get this check? A. Mr. Furlong gave me the check and instructed me to present it at the bank, as I did, and told me that he would be at the bank when I presented it.

Q. Was Mr. Furlong there? A. Yes, he came into the bank while I was at the teller's window. That was when Mr. Warner, as I believe the teller's name is, told him to arrest me.

Q. Then you do not know whether the check was a forgery or not? A. No, sir. I was only obeying the instructions of my employer, Mr. Furlong. I guess he can tell you all about that check.

More consternation, but this time among the police, who had been confident that Dingfelter was one of the leaders of the bank robbers on the Pacific coast. The moment Dingfelter stated that he was a detective one of the city detectives rushed out of the court to the office of the chief of police, who was in the opposite end of the building, and informed him what had occurred. The chief rushed into the court room, and from that time consternation prevailed among all the authorities around the building.

For two days Dingfelter was kept upon the stand. After he had been excused I was called. Having been duly sworn, I was told by the prosecuting attorney to state to the court and jury how I had been approached by Mr. Clover and himself, and what I had done in connection with the case. I gave a detailed account of my work from the beginning. When I had finished my direct testimony the counsel for the defense began to cross-examine me.

"Where did you get this check?" he asked, exhibiting the check which Dingfelter had presented.

"This is one of the blank checks that I took from Dr. Smith's office in the manner already described," I answered.

KNOCKING ME DOWN AND INFLICTING A SEVERE CONTUSION.

"Then you stole this check from Dr. Smith's office?" was the next question.

"I took that blank check from Dr. Smith's office without his knowledge or consent."

Q. Who filled out this check and signed Dr. Smith's name? A. That check was filled out by one of my employees I stood alongside of him while he filled it out. He did it under my instructions, and if he had refused to do it I would have discharged him and he knew it; and if the law has been violated in any way I am responsible for it."

"You knew that it was a forgery, and that forgery is a crime under the law?" inquired the opposing counsel. To which I replied that, inasmuch as intent is the essence of crime, and as there was no intent to obtain money or other valuables by means of the check, I did not believe I had been guilty of forgery. I pointed out, furthermore, that I had been at the bank on the morning when McCulloch presented the check, for the purpose of preventing the teller from cashing it, in case he had failed to perceive that the signature was not genuine.

Almost every person in the court room had been of the opinion that I had got myself into serious trouble by obtaining the blank checks and causing one to be filled out and signed and presented. But after my explanation it was evident that I had remained well within the letter of the law.

The testimony was overwhelming against Maxwell, and the jury quickly returned a verdict of murder in the first degree. It is satisfactory to add that Maxwell, or Brookes, paid the penalty of his crime by hanging.

The psychology of this case makes it unusually interesting. "Why," I have been asked many times, "did you cause McCulloch to knock you down and strip the policeman and yourself, compelling you, furthermore, to go around for several days with your right eye and one side of your face discolored?"

I knew that Maxwell was enjoying the notoriety which the newspapers were giving him. I knew, also, that the public was growing tired of reading about him, and, therefore, believed that if I could paint my assistant as a more desperate criminal for the time being, by the notoriety which he, in turn, would gain through the newspapers, it would have the effect of attracting Maxwell's attention to him, so that he might bask in the light which was shed upon McCulloch. I considered it necessary to have McCulloch slug me and the police officer in order to allay any suspicion that might have arisen in the mind of the chief of police or any of his men. The chief was an alert and experienced officer, and if he had for a moment suspected that McCulloch was not what he represented himself to be, or that he was connected with me, he would undoubtedly have exposed the scheme.

I could have obtained the blank check from Dr. Smith for the asking, but Dr. Smith would, of course, have wanted an explanation, and if I had given it Dr. Smith would have been obliged to state the facts on the witness stand when called before the grand jury, and this would have been fatal to the plan. By keeping my plans and motives profoundly secret I produced this result: that each person told the truth, as he believed it to be.

As there was no city fund for the payment of the expenses of outside detectives, Mr. Clover paid McCulloch out of his own pocket, the total sum expended amounting to about six hundred dollars. I got, as my compensation, the above-mentioned black eye, a swollen jaw, and a number of bumps and bruises.

BIG MIX-UP AT CONVENTION

Alternate and Proxy-Holder Insist on Voting While Delegate Himself Is Present.

A southern black-county convention was in progress, and the hall was crowded. Among rows upon rows of the dusky sons of toil an occasional white delegate stood out like a flake of snow on a coal car.

The chairman was calling the roll. One by one the delegates answered yea or nay till the name of James Levy was called. Up jumped a burly negro, as black as ink. "I'se his proxy, and I votes yea." From across the hall came another voice: "Mr. Cheerman, Mr. Cheerman, I'se his alternate, an' I votes nay."

"I'se de gem'man entitled to dis yar vote, and it's yea."

"Don' you listen to his talk, Mr. Cheerman. De alternate's got de say so, an' de vote is nay."

Back and forward, forward and back, the alternate and proxy of James Levy wrangled, while the chairman vainly pounded for silence. A third man in the hall stood up, and endeavored to make himself heard above the tumultuous voting. The chairman caught sight of him, and leaping to his feet, he shouted above the din:

"Mr. Proxy an' Mr. Alternate, if you all don' stop dat rumpus I'se gwine use dis hyar gavel on you' haids, an' dat's de truf. I'se tellin' you. Now," he continued as the rivals quieted down, "we gwine hyar what the gem'man standin' up in de back of de hall's got ter say."

"Please, suh, Mr. Cheerman," the person addressed questioned, "I wants ter ax what fo' all dis noise 'bout. Dar's James Levy hisself sittin' down yonder. Why don' he do his own votin'?"

A Catastrophe.

"They say soap is scarce in Berlin."
"Then what will they do when it is clean gone?"

SOME TWENTY YEARS AFTER

J. P. Morgan Took Lively Interest in Sound Money Demonstration—Had His Boys Marching.

"This preparedness parade reminds me strongly of the sound money parade which took place just about 20 years ago and in which Wall street was just as keenly interested as it is in today's parade," said an old-timer in the financial district, according to New York Sun. "One of the features of the sound money parade was the interest the father of the present J. P. Morgan took in it. I had occasion to go into the old Drexel building late in the afternoon on several days previous to the parade and I found that Mr. Morgan had 'his boys' marching up and down the floor of the old building. He was just as interested in the showing the men from his office were going to make as any one of the clerks who were to march under the banners of the firm. On the day of the parade the line formed at the lower end of Broad street and as the 'J. P. Morgan' boys came marching up the street and looked up at the windows they found him waving a big white silk handkerchief at them while his keen eyes ran over everyone of his men in the line. From the interest which the big men of the street are taking in today's parade I am convinced that the spirit of patriotism and unity in the country is just as strong today as it was 20 years ago."

Following Up a Fable.

"Of course, you remember the fable of the thrifty ant and the mendicant grasshopper?"

"Yes; the grasshopper, having sung all summer, was invited to dance."

"And then what happened?"

"Well, if the grasshopper was any good as a dancer, it ought to have made enough money to make the ant feel like small change."

THROUGH A Woman's Eyes

By JEAN NEWTON

THE JOY OF ONE KIND OF HOARDING

IN HIS book, "Small Talk at Wreyland," Cecil Torr tells about a friend of his being appalled to find in a broker's office a shabby old man speculating heavily. He remonstrated with the broker for allowing a man of his years to risk money which he could apparently not afford to lose. The broker quickly allayed his fears. It appeared that the old man in question always kept a hundred thousand in government bonds—a sort of insurance against ever being reduced to actual want!

And the author comments on the love of money for its own sake. "I doubt," he says, "if many people understand the happiness of feeling thoroughly fit. There is a joy in knowing you can jump clean over any gate you see; and I think the miser has this joy in knowing he can pay for anything he likes. But he does not go buying things, any more than you go jumping over gates."

That's an idea. And the first thought that comes to me in connection with it is of another kind of hoarding that must be rich in joy and satisfaction. Unlike the amassing of gold this is a sound kind of hoarding. It is even more sure than the saving up of physical strength. For it is something that does not diminish with the years. That is the storing up of poise, of control, of inner calm, of spiritual peace.

What a wonderful feeling it must be to know that one has oneself so disciplined that no outward circumstance can possibly shake one. What satisfaction to know that no matter what the provocation or emergency, one is sure of oneself. What a bulwark against easy disappointment, disillusion, suffering, heartbreak, to feel that one has a spiritual independence and assurance that can always be drawn on.

In some ways that supreme possession is easier of achievement than the miser's gold. In other ways it is more difficult. Misers enjoy amassing their gold. But self discipline is not fun—not at least until the stage of the struggle where infinite patience and gallantry and agonizing efforts and sacrifice and self-denial are already behind one. The cost is high. But what a prize!

THIS CAR IS WIDER THAN IT IS HIGH

THE GRAHAM is a car of great beauty. Flowing lines promise fleet performance. But no casual inspection can reveal its many outstanding mechanical features. Only by riding in this car can you appreciate the reserve of smoothness, safety and comfort.

The low center of gravity and the extra width between wheels combine to make the Graham hug the road at all speeds. The unique "outboard" springs cut sideway to a minimum, even around sharp curves. A precisely compensated steering mechanism makes the car seem to handle itself. The driver is relieved of strain on nerves and muscles. Longer trips than you usually take are pleasant, for you are relaxed. Driving in traffic is easier.

Whether you plan to buy a new car today or not, you are invited to ride in the Graham. You will discover things to interest any automobile owner.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS SOUNDS

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—So many filmland illusions and legends have toppled in recent weeks that one more probably will make no difference.

"Hesitate no longer," said "Hezi" Tate, perhaps sanctioning the blasting of this last lingering tradition. (His real name is Cullen Tate, but after 17 years as first assistant director to Cecil B. De Mille, the inevitable nickname has virtually supplanted his own.)

Without hesitation, then, he goes:

"I've never said 'Yes' to C. B. unless I was absolutely in accord with his ideas," averred Hezi.

"I guess that's why I've lasted so long with him," Hezi continued. "I've said no to him quite often."

Moreover, according to "Hezi," the De Mille yes-men, celebrated in Hollywood legend, seldom last but are generally fired after the second blind, unreasoning affirmative!

A Prize From Charley

Charles Spencer Chaplin, while preparing in leisurely fashion to begin another comedy in which the erstwhile platinum blond Paulette Goddard will be leading lady, appears in the novel role of sports benefactor.

Charlie is donating the prize—"a new suit, a new overcoat, and a gold watch," says the announcement—to the winner of South London's borough market half-bushel basket-carrying championship contest.

Charlie as an urchin used to play around old Borough market, watching the market porters carrying fruit, vegetables, all manner of produce from the stands to the venders' carts, the big baskets balanced on their heads.

The "championship" is quite a sporting event, the rules calling for contestants to carry "12 halves up."

Pat—And All-Inclusive

The visiting lady from Omaha was trying to identify a screen actress, a favorite whose name she couldn't remember:

"You know," she said, "the one with the big eyes who has been married so many times."

Nobody solved it. "Oh, surely you know," she persisted. "She's the one who played in so many wild pictures."

Which is hitting the descriptive nail right on the head!

At The Theatres

Today

Kingston: "Reunion in Vienna." Perfectly swell entertainment is this lavishly done and brilliantly acted comedy that has the fading glory of the regal Hapsburgs as its plot basis. Almost word for word, the movie version is the same as the stage play that proved so wildly popular, and if anything, the cinema offering outshines the legitimate success. John Barrymore, in the role of the madcap Archduke Rudolf, is perfect in the down at heel role of a great nobleman, now turned taxi-driver since the war. Along with the other remnants of a once great and flowering Austrian nobility, Archduke Rudolf and his tottering compatriots decide to have a reunion in Vienna to celebrate the birthday of Emperor Francis Joseph. Complications arise when a former sweetheart of the Archduke, now married to another, meets her former lover in a romantic Vienna setting. Sparkling, gay, witty, and lavish, this talkie has everything to make it appealing and enjoyable. John Barrymore was never better cast nor more capable than in the tailor cut role of the dashing Rudolf, while Diana Wynyard as his former princess-sweetheart is charming. Characterizations by Frank Morgan, Una Merkel, Henry Travers and May Robson are treats in themselves. Four star entertainment.

Orpheum: "Devil is Driving" and "What Price Decency." Edmund Lowe and Wynne Gibson make a good pair in the first offering, a gangster tale that has a big city garage as its locale. James Gleason and Dickie Moore are also in the cast. "What Price Decency" with Dorothy Burgess and Alan Hale is as the name suggests, a study in morals.

Broadway: "Lilly Turner". Rather bitter stuff is this latest talkie of Ruth Chatterton. Highly dramatic, it's the story of a fair weather woman who drives one man insane, who ruins another man's life completely, and who drives another to drink, all during the course of the picture. There seems to be little reason or understanding to the film. It teaches no moral and possesses no virtues. On the contrary, it flaunts sex from start to finish, and Miss Chatterton, Frank McHugh, Guy Kibbee and a capable cast are lost in a quagmire of sordidness.

Broadway: "Out All Night." Genuine comedy by those two excellent performers, Zasu Pitts and Slim Summerville, along with a laughable story, makes this picture well worth viewing. Slim Summerville, in the role of a pampered mama's boy, falls in love with Zasu Pitts, and when they marry, it is essential that mama go along on the honeymoon to be sure that sonny is all right. There are an abundance of chuckles in this talkie, and the work of Mr. Summerville and Miss Pitts is a pleasure to witness. Others in the cast are Laura Hope Crews and Shirley Grey.

PINE HILL

Pine Hill, July 26—Andrus Cole, formerly of this place, but who has been teaching for the past 13 years in Detroit, Mich., is spending part of his summer vacation in this place visiting friends and relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Warren and son, of Milton on the Hudson, spent the past week at the home of Mr. Warren's sister, Mrs. Sylvenus Townsend.

Henry Meisels recently returned to New York city, where he has accepted a position for the summer.

A number from this place attended the barn dance given at Stewart Farm in Dry Brook last Wednesday evening and a very pleasant time was reported by all who attended.

Due to the increased number of autos on the highways a number of accidents have occurred on the dangerous curves of Pine Hill, which is conceded to be one of the most dangerous grades in the Catskill region.

Edward Misner and Roy Misner motored to New York city Friday and en route they visited Camp Smith, where they were entertained most graciously by the officers in charge.

Mrs. S. Shapiro and daughter, Mariam, were confined to their home with an attack of summer grip.

The official board of the Big Indian M. E. Church met at the parsonage Tuesday evening.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the M. E. Church will hold its annual church fair in the church hall Wednesday and Thursday, August 2 and 3.

The scholars of the M. E. Sunday school will be treated to a picnic on Friday at Chichester and through the "Notch" and other points of interest.

The Rev. Gordon B. Fear was in New York city Monday attending a financial meeting of the Minister's Mutual Assistance Society, of which he is treasurer.

PILES Relief at Last!

No more torture! Walk, sit and sleep in comfort. Go to the stool without dread. For Pazo Ointment absolutely puts an end to Pile suffering of all forms—Blind, Itching, Bleeding and Protruding!

Pazo does the three things necessary. (1) It soothes—relieves the soreness and inflammation. (2) It heals—repairs the torn tissue. (3) It absorbs—dries up the excess mucus and reduces the swollen blood vessels which are Piles.

The method of application makes Pazo doubly effective. Special Pile Pipe attached to tube permits application high up in rectum so all parts are thoroughly medicated. Get Pazo today and realize the relief in store for you!

Plan For Fair

The Men's Club of the Church of the Comforter has been working some time for the preparation of its miniature world's fair and Mardi Gras. Members are planning to have it three nights in the large Comforter Hall. Last year they successfully held a Mardi Gras and Festival, filling their hall each night with a large and appreciative audience. The men have promised to have a bigger and better festival this year as they feel that with the experience of holding one last year they can present a much larger affair. The men have already had two card parties to secure funds for the purchase of merchandise for their festival and are planning another card party in the near future.

ANOTHER BOY LEARNS TO SWIM AT Y. M. C. A.

The latest addition to the swimmers' group at the Y. M. C. A. is Donald Manning. Donald has been a member of the beginner's class until Monday afternoon when he passed the swimmers' test by swimming 30 feet through deep water.

Several new members have joined the group recently. There is only one of the original group left, all the others have passed on to the swimmers' class. This class is for boy members and meets each Monday and Thursday at [illegible] o'clock.

There are no regular classes for adults but instruction will be given by appointment.

Financial and Commercial

New York, July 26 (AP).—Financial markets mulled about rather indecisively and indifferently today, the trading temperature cooled down to somewhere around normal and brokerage houses began to breathe easier.

Stocks, after a firm but unenthusiastic start, slid off a little, rallied again moderately and maintained a fairly steady and dull pace for a while. Most of the leaders recorded early advances to 1 to 2 points, and later yielded substantial portions of these gains. The market opened at 11 a. m. instead of noon, with the closing set for 2 p. m. instead of 3. Grains were firm at both Chicago and Winnipeg, cotton was fairly steady and other commodities moved indifferently. The dollar rallied rather irregular.

Some of the motors and "wet" shares made the best showing in the morning. U. S. Industrial Alcohol rallied 4 points and General Motors and Chrysler were up around 2 each. Homestake Mining came back for a gain of 3 on a small turnover. Case, with recessions liquidation apparently out of the way, recovered some 4 points, while Du Pont, Canada Dry, Eastman Kodak, Goodyear, Dome, American Commercial Alcohol, Western Union, American Water Works and United Aircraft were up 1 to more than 3. U. S. Steel lost a point or more, as did Union Pacific.

Wall Street as a whole, is hoping for a few weeks of quiet and orderly trading. It is felt, in some quarters, that if the recently hysterical price movements calm down to a relative steadiness, national recovery plans will be materially aided.

BLOOMINGTON.

Bloomington, July 26.—A number of the girls who belong to the Girls' League for Service, left Tuesday afternoon for the annual camping trip in Springtown. Mrs. Edwin LeFevre and Miss Florence Relyea are chaperones. Those who left Tuesday were Ruth Hotaling, Violet and Dorothy Smith, Shirley Brown, Elinor Bundy, Marguerite Randegger. Helen Wesp, Virginia Markle and Evelyn Fagher are expecting to go to camp a little later.

Shirley and Betty Holstein have gone to Staten Island to spend their vacation.

During July the people of the church had two very enjoyable outings. The first was the church school picnic. Myer's bus and five cars conveyed the members to Forsyth Park. All this park lacked was a safe place for the children to go into the water. The new pool makes this park an ideal place for an outing for all ages. The second was the Missionary Society picnic held on Old Orchard Farm at Maple Hill. Twenty-two people enjoyed the gracious hospitality of the Misses Hardenburgh. The Rev. Anson Coutant gave a missionary address. The subject was "Jonah, the Missionary." It was greatly enjoyed. A bountiful lunch was served at noon. The time passed quickly with songs and conversation. Many things of historic interest were learned. All those who walked to the back of the farm were amply repaid by the wonderful view overlooking the Rifton dam and lake. It was an ideal day. After many expressions of appreciation the people reluctantly departed for their homes.

Mrs. Holt and her daughter, Josephine, of New York city, spent the week-end with Mrs. Joseph Yunker. On returning home they took with them Connie Ennist, small son of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Ennist. Mr. Ennist, who has been ill for some time, is slowly improving at this writing.

Mrs. Edwin LeFever is taking the counselor and members of the Girls' League for a ten-days' outing to Homestead Farm, Springtown.

Mr. and Mrs. William Ostrander and son, William, Jr., and daughter, Miss Sophie, of Jersey City came on Monday to their Honeymoon Cottage, where they will spend their two weeks' vacation.

Miss Dora Bell of Whiteport, who is in training at the Kingston Hospital, has a three-weeks' vacation. She went to New York city with her brother, where she will spend a few days with relatives. Then she will come back to spend a few days with her father, J. Bell.

Church services will be held at 9:45 followed by Bible school. Evening services will be held at 8 o'clock. The pastor, the Rev. C. V. W. Bedford, extends an invitation to everybody. Young people's meeting will be held at 7 o'clock, with Bible class meeting at 8 o'clock, to which an invitation is extended to everyone to come.

Franklin Bell, who has a position in New York city, spent his vacation with his father, J. Bell, and sister in Whiteport.

Mrs. Etta Lewis and sons, Leroy Lewis and wife and little daughter and James Lewis, all of Flushing, L. I., spent the week-end at their cottage, which they have for the summer.

Mrs. Anna Hamlin has gone to the home of her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Friend Wilklow, in New Paltz, where she is spending some of her vacation.

Mrs. Raymond Markle with relatives and friends has been spending a few days motoring through the White Mountains and New Hampshire.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira D. Bush spent Sunday with Harry Bush and friends at Leggs Mills, where he has a camp.

Miss Gertrude Norton of Brooklyn is spending a few days' vacation here with her mother, Mrs. J. H. Norton, and with her brothers and sisters at their summer cottage.

Mrs. Rufus Lefever was taken to the Benedictine Hospital on Saturday evening for treatment as she is quite seriously ill. She is reported just a little better. Dr. L. G. Rymph attended her.

Mrs. A. D. Relyea and Miss Jane DuBois went to the Boy Scout Camp on Sunday afternoon to see her son, Gordon Relyea.

Mr. and Mrs. Valaitas called on her mother, Mrs. Leutz, and family one day of the past week.

Miss Mabel Hyde of New York city spent the week-end with her mother, Mrs. Harriet Hyde.

Carl Damback of Bergenfield, N. J., and Herman Thielbar of River Edge, N. J., spent a couple of days of the past week at their summer cottage here.

Ambulance Calls

Tuesday the city ambulance made the following calls: Susan DeWitt was taken from her home 211 North street to the Kingston Hospital, Ella Brafman from her home 35 Murray street to the Kingston Hospital and Maggie Raglan from Steep Rocks to the Benedictine Hospital.

Olive Bridge Dance

The regular weekly dance will be held tonight at the I. O. O. F. Hall, Olive Bridge. Dancing will be held from nine till one. Pineola orchestra will furnish the music.

SHOKAN

The next regular meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society will be held in the basement of the Reformed Church on Wednesday, August 2.

Charles Green of Boston is spending the summer at the home of his sister, Mrs. Gabriel Rickard.

Grant DeSilva, one of Boiceville's progressive storekeepers, was a business caller here Tuesday morning.

Herman Wendt has fitted up the front of his refreshment place on the state road with new awnings. Mr. Wendt appears to be untiring in his efforts to add to the attractiveness of his grounds and buildings.

On July 27, 1861, the Stars and Stripes were raised upon the Shokan churches as a gesture of loyalty to the Union cause. The ceremonies took place a few days after the desperate battle of Bull Run in which many local boys were engaged.

Michael Allen, genial night gate tender down at the reservoir, has discovered a spring in the rear of his residence which he proposes to tap and lead the water to a lower elevation near his newly completed garage. To cover the water hole Mr. Allen has acquired a circular slab of bluestone, which probably was hewn out well nigh to perfection by one of the old time quarrymen in the days when the bluestone industry flourished in the land.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Neale of Poughkeepsie are sojourning at their bungalow on the north boulevard. During the early part of their visit, before the rains came, the Neales were obliged to haul their drinking water from the Fuller spring, half a mile further up the boulevard.

A stranger with a stalled car and a horn that refused to stall provided a lot of innocent amusement for those of our many city guests who happened to be in the village center at the time. Attracted by the incessant tooting, a crowd gathered at a little distance to enjoy the discomfiture of the motorist who was unable to silence his horn. Always something going on in the hub of the reservoir section. New Yorkers are noted for their propensity to "gather around," and seldom a day passes that does not afford opportunity to our city visitors for gratifying that urge.

Racing an Ancient Sport; Runners Would Fall Dead

All down the ages, foot racing has been practiced by grownups as well as by children. The Greeks were great runners, and the foot races at the Olympic games were famous all over the world. Some of these were so strenuous that we are told that several runners actually fell down dead at the end of the course, says the Montreal Herald.

In England in the Eighteenth century, races were run on foot for large sums of money, sometimes with ridiculous handicaps. For example, one man with a jockey on his back raced a fat, elderly gentleman; another bowled a coach wheel at eight miles an hour round a platform in St. Giles' fields in London; and a third ran from Hyde Park corner to Brentford with nearly sixty pounds of fish on his head!

It was quite usual at country weddings in the north of England, less than a century ago, for races to be run from the church door to the bride's house for ribbons. As soon as the wedding was over, the guests would race back to the house, and the first arrival was awarded the bride's ribbon, which was greatly prized.

Insects Show Intellect; Have Persuasive Powers

Bees can be taught to select boxes containing sugar by their color; butterflies can distinguish betwen apple juice and other liquids by touching them with their feet and one form of ant will respond to high staccato notes from a violin. Such are some of the examples of highly developed insect senses described by an official in an address before the Entomological society of London.

"Many insects are so highly organized," he said, "that I feel compelled to credit them with faculties at least in some degree more advanced than mere unconscious responses. Ants can recognize each other, and distinguish members of a rival colony. They can induce others to join them in some apparently purposeful action." Discussing the eyes of insects he said that in the eye of the butterfly there might be 5,000 independent components.

Pronouncing Chinese Names

There are a number of dialects in China, all from a common stock, but differing considerably in pronunciation and spoken vocabulary. When Chinese words are written in the Arabic alphabet they are written phonetically and should be pronounced as spelled, since no American or European, without studying the language, can hope to approximate the various tones and inflections of a Chinese. There is a broad distinction between the written and spoken language, and while a Chinese from Canton would not understand one from Foochow, they both (if literate) would be able to read the same characters. Mandarin, spoken around Peiping, is the standard form of the language, and is used by travelers throughout China, being most likely to be understood.—Pathfinder Magazine.

American Heroines

By LOUISE M. COMSTOCK

Ann Maria Lane

OUT of musty old records lying in the archives of the Virginia State ary at Richmond has but recently en reconstructed the story of a oine forgotten since 1808.

In that year, so read the molder- g records, the state of Virginia anted a pension to one Ann Maria ane, who fought "in the garb and ith the courage of a soldier" in the rous engagement between the Brit- h and the American Revolutionary ops at Germantown, Pa., in 1777. e learn further that Ann Maria not ly marched with a gun in the ranks, t "performed extraordinary military rvices" and was "disabled by a severe ound."

The known facts of this gallant oman's life are few. She has been entified as the wife of John Lane, sailor in the Virginia navy, who took art in 1781 in the disastrous en- unter in the James river at Os- rne's Landing, when the state's fleet, ix ships, eight brigs, five sloops and wo schooners, met the superior rces of the traitorous Benedict Ar- old, just come from looting Richmond. he state lost its vessels but few of s men. In 1796 we find John Lane, is wife and two daughters, living at oint of Forks, up the James, an out- ost against the Indians. In 1800, hen the insurgent Gabriel was prod- ing the negroes about Richmond to surrection, the Lanes were returned o that city and lived at the barracks ear the state capitol. Here, it seems, Ann Maria took to nursing the sol- iers, caring for as many as fifteen uardsmen at one time.

In 1802 Dr. J. H. Foushee, city ealth officer, wrote to Governor Mon- oe requesting that Ann Maria be al- owed some recompense for her serv- ices. From his letter we learn that he was then an old woman, scarcely qual to her self-imposed task, and ame from that wound received at Ger- mantown. It brought Ann Maria the "moderate consideration" of six dollars month in addition to food and lodg- ng. In 1804 the state finally gave her n infirmary for her patients.

But in the fall of that same year, udged too old and lame for her work, Ann Maria was retired and her name dropped from the payroll. In 1808, owever, having investigated her case, Governor Cabell brought it to the at- ention of the state legislature. The tate at that time eagerly adopted this Revolutionary heroine. They granted er a pension of $200 per year.

GOOD EATS

EVERYBODY likes lemon pie, unless there is something the matter with their digestion or taste. Here is a nice thick one:

Deep Lemon Pie.

Mix three tablespoons of cornstarch, one and one-half cups sugar, add gradually two cups of boiling water and boil five minutes. Add the grated rind and juice of two lemons, cool slightly, then add the well beaten yolks of four eggs. Cut and fold in the whites of four eggs beaten stiff and dry. Line a deep pan with rich pastry and lay an inch wide strip around the edge of the rim, turn in the mixture and bake twenty-five minutes. Serve chilled. If wished, a meringue may be added to the top, using three eggs, making a most fluffy pie. However the pie is good without the meringue, and many prefer it so.

Napoleon Torte.

Cream one-half cup of butter and the same of sugar until very light; add four well beaten yolks, stir well, then add one-half cup of flour, sifted with a bit of salt, one-fourth teaspoon each of cinnamon and cloves. Add one teaspoon each of grated lemon peel and orange peel, two teaspoons of grated chocolate or cocoa, ten almonds grated. Mix thoroughly and fold in the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs. Pour into three buttered layer tins and spread evenly—the layers should be very thin. Bake fifteen to twenty minutes. When cool put the layers together with marmalade. Cover the top with marmalade and then cover with a chocolate icing if desired.

Cider Frappe.

Heat sweet cider to the boiling point. Skim, strain through cheese cloth. Chill and freeze to a mush. Serve in stemmed glasses with pieces of ginger for a garnish. Use either the crystallized or the preserved ginger.

Tarts.

Bake small pies, using the patty pans inverted. Fill the shells with raspberry jam and top with whipped cream sprinkled with pistachio nuts.

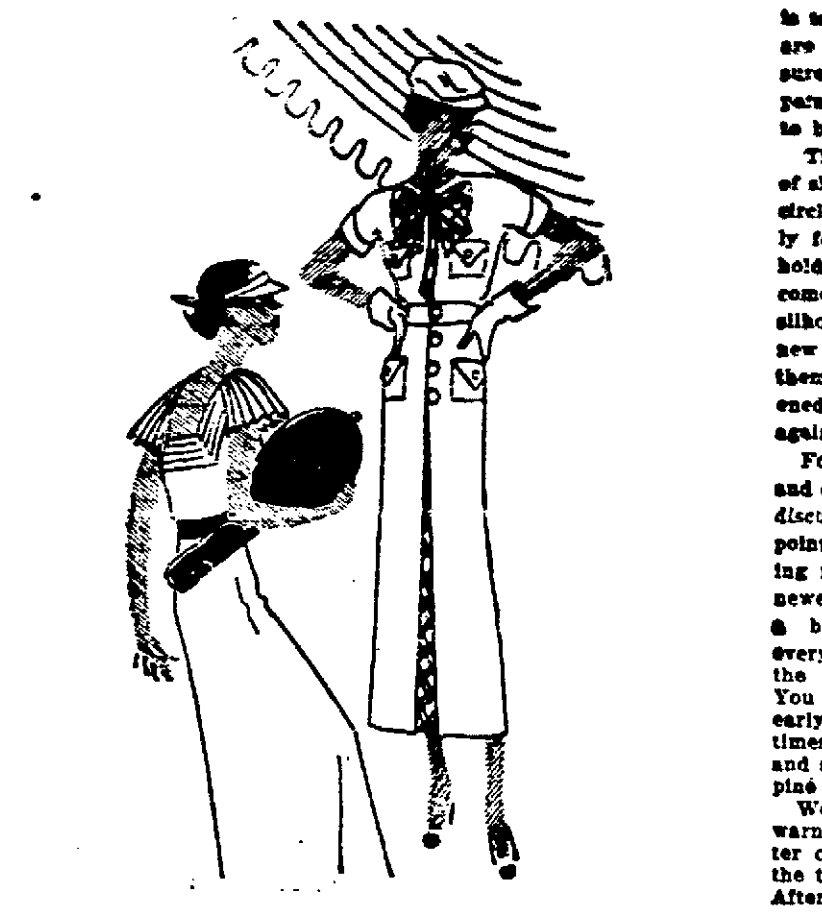
FASHIONS by ELEANOR GUNN

Fashion Goes to Court



A white flat crepe tennis frock has a knife pleated bodice yoke and knife pleated cap sleeves. The belt is red.

A natural color linen redingote with short sleeves is worn over a red and white plaid gingham frock. The visor tam cap is a youthful style.

Paris, Greatly Ruffled

The ruffled state of mind in which evening fashions in Paris have been is reflected in every report we have received from Paris. Flounces and ruches of the most frou-frou sort that in vaporous fabrics are bringing forth such descriptions as "sweet girl graduates" and "girly-girly"—regardless of the fact that many of the wearers of these styles are literally far removed from such types.

DID YOU KNOW THAT

Satin evening dresses are shown and worn in white, also in pastels and in a lovely green shade, a rich bottle tone.

Certain houses are also showing white satin having tiny motifs in black, stars being among the most attractive, also black and white, and novelty crepe satins are also interesting.

Look to Your Sleeves for Fashionable Trends

New York—Midsummer though it is to you, it's fall so far as fashions are concerned. Nothing much is sure, however, at this early date, one person's guess being almost as apt to be right as another's.

There continues to be much talk of sleeves and shoulders in designing circles, with opinions rather violently for or against. The first group holds that women have only just become accustomed to the wide top silhouette and it will be continued in new forms; the second that the theme has been overdone and cheapened and there will be a reaction against it.

For that matter, there is the pro and con on almost every detail under discussion, which brings me to the point of cautioning those with a failing for rushing out and buying the newest thing the shops offer, to wait a bit before accepting as gospel everything you hear or even see. Buy the more conservative things first. You never can be really sure how the early styles will develop. Sometimes they die from over-popularity, and sometimes they just naturally pine away and die from neglect.

We have already had several warnings from Paris, the storm center of fashion at the moment, that the trend was away from simplicity. After all, simplicity is a relative term. We have not been wearing conspicuously simple clothes this summer, so if our point of view is to be adjusted to the angle of seeing the summer fashions as simple, it may give you an idea what to expect later on.

We have already heard a good deal about the fuzzy, or hairy, fabrics that are to be worn. It is to be presumed that they will contribute a good deal to less definite lines, and we do get an impression that lines will be less clearly defined.

Hats are to be fuzzy too, some of those with high pointed crowns are made of shaggy materials, either wool or a mixture of silk and wool, or of feathers which seem to be winging their way back to the front ranks of fashion.

SLEEVES THAT ARE DIFFERENT

The frock illustrated is developed in red jersey, and the sleeves that are shaped to widen the shoulders are in pique. Detachable red jersey cuffs are an amusing detail.

This dress could also be developed in other fabrics—lightweight woolen with velvet or satin, for example, also all velvet.

HOSE CONNECTION CUT, MUCH NEEDED WATER WASTED.

West Shokan, July 26.—During Saturday evening several thousands of gallons of much needed water for the use of Main street residents was let run to waste through the pranks of someone who cut the temporary hose connection hook-up leading from the main line tap in the school house cellar. The break was not located until 1:30 Sunday morning by Lauren Hesley, who was sent by Mr. Colange to investigate. Mr. Colange has also recently had a quantity of building lumber removed from its place of storage, where the work of building his large reserve storage reservoir has just been completed.

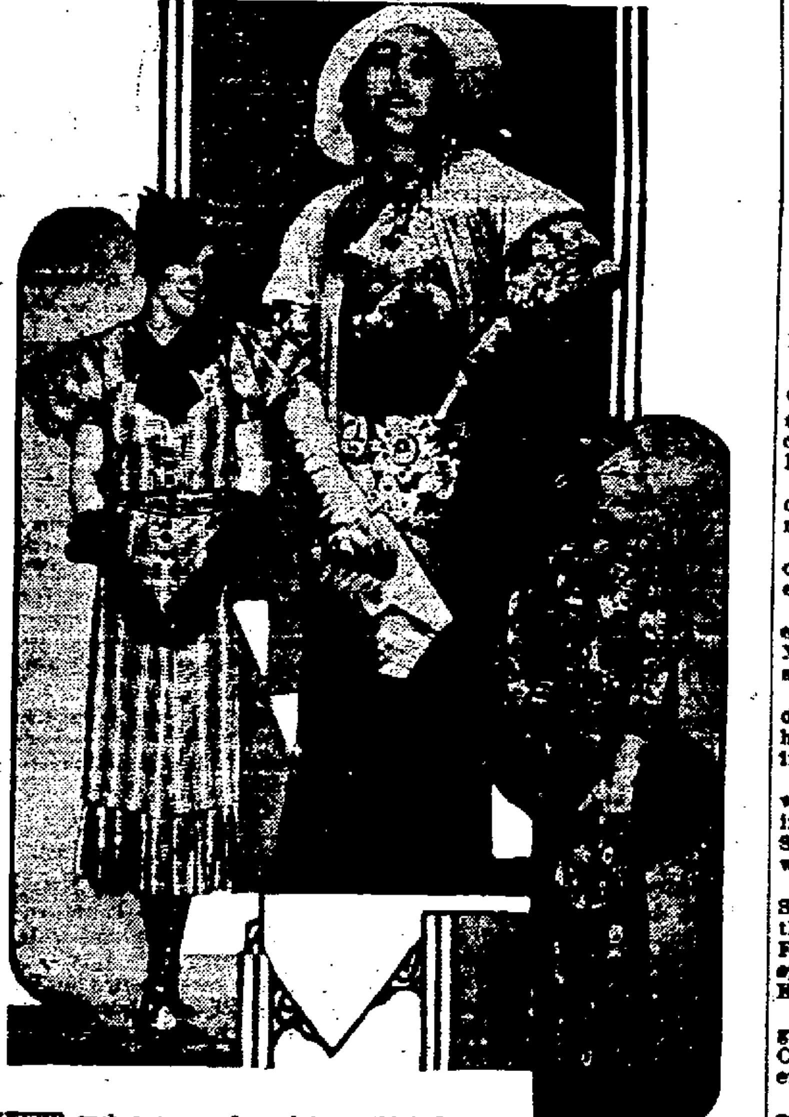
Prints Triumph Anew This Summer

By CHERIE NICHOLAS



NEVER such a season for prints as this! To add to their glory they are taking on simply ravishing touches of colorful velvet trimmings or else they are fur-bordered, which adds elegance supreme.

The floral patternings of the newest prints are gorgeous beyond description. So outstandingly are the florals silhouetted against their backgrounds it would almost seem as if they had been painted by an artist with strokes deft and sure.

If we were to employ all the adjectives at our command we would still feel we had failed to do justice to the beauty of this season's prints and so with the thought that pictures speak more eloquently than words we are referring you to the illustration herewith.

The stunning costume centered in the group is a study in white and black. It is a Worth creation. The dress is fashioned of a superb white and black line print. These line effects are the "last word" in prints. In interpreting the mode at its best Worth makes a decorative play on velvet, using shirred black velvet for the girdle with white mat velvet for the three-quarter coat, the gloves and bag offering a pleasing diversion in that they are formed of fine ribbed white velvet. The pleated shoulder line of this enchanting velvet wrap is a touch of genius.

For bizarre and exotic coloring we refer you to the striking costume to the right in the picture. There is nothing smarter this season for daytime wear than a jacket suit all of gay print. They range from simplest types to magnificent affairs such as the model shown here. The outstanding note about this handsome print is that its gay flowers, which are in a riot of colors, are printed on a dusky red background, which leads us to say that latest reports from Paris declare that the very newest prints trend to reddish hues. The coat is edged with blue fox which gives it infinite chic. The swanky little hat is of brown cire. These cired fabrics, ribbons and laces, are very prominent in the realm of millinery materials.

In the exceedingly clever black and white taffeta afternoon costume pictured to the left, which also comes from the house of Worth, we again see the magic of velvet as it appears on the summer style program in a trimming and an accessory role. The collar, the jabot and the top of the gloves, likewise the jaunty beret which milady wears, are of black velvet. The pleated foundation, the tunic lines and the wide-draped puff sleeves are style points of special significance.

It is surprising how many smart Parisiennes are wearing little velvet hats right in the summertime. Accessory sets which include scarf, gloves (the latest in velvet mitts), bag, sometimes adding a belt and shoes, should be part of every well-ordered wardrobe. Then, too, a collection of velvet bows and girdles will not come amiss, as they may be called upon at any time to enhance this or that summery frock.

HIGH FALLS

High Falls, July 26.—Mrs. D. O'Leary of Clifton, N. Y., Mrs. Mamie Beach of Rosendale, Mrs. D. Roach and daughter and Mr. and Mrs. T. Hoben and Donald Farrell of Kingston spent one day the past week with Mr. and Mrs. H. Farrell.

Elmer Pratt called on his mother Sunday morning.

Mrs. Alexander Stokes and son, Charles, attended service in St. John's Church Sunday morning.

There are summer guests at the Hazelmeyer Cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Young and daughter, who have a camp for the summer at Lake Katrine, recently called on their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Farrell.

Wessel Clearwater cleaned the cistern of Hugh Farrell, using cement and lime and made a fine job.

Jason Connors of Walden called on friends in this place Sunday afternoon.

T. Hoben and Donald Farrell spent one day the past week with Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Farrell and did some painting.

Mr. and Mrs. Festus Yeaple motored to Roxbury on Sunday to visit her father, Ira Smith, who is spending some time with his son, Orie.

The Woman's Missionary Society will hold its regular monthly meeting at the home of Miss Jessie Snyder, Thursday afternoon of this week at 3 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Farrell of South Amboy, N. J., paid a visit to their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Farrell, of High Falls and also spent a night with relatives in Kingston.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Ayers and grandson, Lawrence Tufts, of Briar Cliff Manor, spent the past week-end with his father.

Donald Farrell is spending his vacation in Kingston with his aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. T. Hoben.

An event of great note took place the past Thursday evening, and the basement of the Reformed Church was the scene of action. A broiler supper was served at 6:30 and there was a large crowd present. The village itself was well represented and there were guests there from Kingston, Stone Ridge, Cottekill, Alligerville, Kripplebush and The Clove. The men did the serving and no one could complain of the service. The ladies were kept busy in the kitchen and before the appointed hour for serving guests were coming in and taking seats at the long tables which were kept filled right up until late in the evening. The broilers were baked and browned to perfection and the rest of the menu was of the same quality. Every thing went off nicely and the supper was both a social and financial success. About $100 was cleared after expenses were deducted. The consistory thanks all who in any way helped toward the success of the supper. Gratitude is expressed for the many donations, the support of members and friends in preparing and serving the meal.

Service was well attended in the Reformed Church on Sunday morning. The subject of the Rev. Mr. Howard's sermon was "Old or New Scripture Reading." Luke 5:27-39. The subject of the children's sermon was "Ebenezer."

The weather over the week-end was intensely warm. On Sunday the thermometer stood 99 degrees in the shade.

The Misses Margaret and Katheryn Steen are employed at the Trowbridge boarding house.

Mrs. James Van Demark's eldest daughter has been visiting relatives in Kingston.

SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN J. GOULD

(Associated Press Sports Editor.)

It was only a year ago that Gene Sarazen was being regarded as the logical successor to the crown of all golfdom, relinquished two years previously by the eminent Atlanta barrister, Robert Tyre Jones, Jr.

Hadn't he won both the British and American Open championships, with remarkable performances, breaking Bob's record abroad and tying the low-scoring record at home? Subsequently didn't he trounce the national P. G. A. champion, Olin Dutra?

He had and he did, but who's who today in the royal and ancient realm?

A couple of young fellows named Johnny Goodman and Denny Shute, who have contributed just one more year's evidence that the player has not yet arrived who can hold a candle to Jones for consistency over any given stretch of fairway.

Goodman trimmed Sarazen by 16 strokes in the American Open. Shute was only one shot in front of Gene in the British Open, but that's all the law requires for a decision in this form-jolting sport.

In The Clutches.

You would hardly have figured a golfer of Sarazen's class to take four shots in two bunkers and then lose his title by one shot. Neither would I and there is not the slightest doubt Sarazen went around St. Andrews' locker room afterward kicking himself for being too confident and not playing safe in "Hell Bunker" on the afternoon of July 7.

One year in the American Open I saw Jones take two sevens on his final round, doing the shuttle act in the traps, but when he got to the home green and needed to hole a tricky 12-foot putt for a tie with Al Espinosa, Bob got the ball down. He did such things so often, under the heaviest pressure, that it ceased to be an accident, or the benign touch of Dame Fortune.

It lifted him, we repeat, to the spot on the heights, around the base of which the rest of the boys are still battling.

Odds Against Goodman.

The last big golfing test of 1933 will offer the chance of Johnny Goodman to duplicate one of the rarities—holding the amateur as well as the open titles in one and the same year—but it is no reflection upon the Nebraskan's skill and courage to say that the odds will be mostly against him in the national tournament at Cincinnati in September.

Even Jones found the amateur match play anything but a happy hunting ground, until he was safely past the first two rounds of 18-hole play, and Goodman has yet to show the same consistency at man-to-man competition he has exhibited in medal play.

The year he eliminated Jones in the first round Goodman was bounced out of the tournament the same day by Lawson Little. He made his best showing, of course, at Five Farms last year, but he was not a match for Ross Somerville in the final round despite some characteristic fireworks around the greens.

Tagging Major League Bases

The Pittsburgh Pirates may not win the National League flag but they apparently are going to have a lot to say about who will. They seem to be taking a fiendish delight in pounding the higher-placed New York Giants and Chicago Cubs just when it will do the most damage.

Last week the Bucs handed the league-leading Giants a set-back by splitting a six-game series. Yesterday, to show they were playing no favorites, they walloped the Cubs in both ends of a double-header, 4-3 and 4-1, leaving the Giants three games out in front and Pittsburgh only a game and a half out of second place.

The work of three players, Steve Swetonic, Hal Smith and Freddy Lindstrom, stood out in yesterday's triumph. The first two pitched effectively, Smith giving only five hits and an unearned run in the second game. Lindstrom, continuing his hitting streak through 22 games, made five hits, scored two runs and batted in three.

The only other National League game saw the St. Louis Cardinals, playing their first game under the management of Frankie Frisch, climb into a fourth-place tie with the Boston Braves by defeating the Cincinnati Reds 3 to 1. Jess Haines pitched six hit ball in a mound duel with Larry Benton.

One inning was enough to enable the Washington Senators to beat the Philadelphia Athletics, 5-1, and increase their American League lead over the New York Yankees to a full game. Five walks off Roy Mahaffey led to four Senator runs in the opening frame and they were plenty as rain stopped the contest after five innings. The Yanks and Boston were rained out altogether.

The Cleveland Indians, "hitless wonders" of the circuit, advanced a notch in the second division standing as Mel Harder outpointed Sam Jones 2 to 1 in a ten inning duel to give the Chicago White Sox their sixth straight defeat. The Indians got only seven blows, including singles by Willie Kamm and Frank Pytlak in the tenth, but Harder limited the Sox to six.

The Detroit Tigers scored early and often against the St. Louis Browns, putting over four runs in the first inning and three more in the third to win 9 to 3 as every player except Ray Hayworth figured in the 15 hit attack.

Yesterday's STARS

By The Associated Press

Ethan Allen, Cardinals—Knocked in two runs in 3-2 victory over Reds.

Mel Harder, Indians—Held White Sox to six hits in ten innings.

Lloyd Waner and Hal Smith, Pirates—Former batted in winning run with pinch hit in first game; latter held Cubs to five hits to win second.

Buddy Myer, Senators—Clouted triple and single against Athletics.

Marvin Owen and Frank Doljack, Tigers—Hit three singles apiece against Browns.

Kingston Cubs Will Book Games

The Kingston Cubs would like to book a game for Sunday and for any day thereafter. Team managers can make arrangements by calling 3677-J between 5 and 6 o'clock any evening.

The lineup of the Kingston Cubs is as follows: Purvis, ss; Moore, 2b; Saurez, rf; Geysler, lf; Astalos, cf; Thorne, c; Fraleigh, 3b; Krom, 1b; Joe Mahar, p, and Embree, p.

Gardeners Play Hogans Tonight

Sills' Gardeners and Van Etten & Hogan's Senecas are slated to meet in a City League game at the Athletic Field this evening. Bill Thomas will be on the mound for the Gardeners with Luke Roosa behind the bat. Johnny Cullen or Johnny Burgevin will do the hurling for the Senecas with Bill Messing on the receiving end.

The Repealer-Clow game scheduled for Tuesday evening was rained out.

Stone Ridge Plays Marlborough Sunday

Stone Ridge will lineup against Marlborough Sunday afternoon. Bill Hornbeck, who pitched the Ridgers to victory over the Walden Red Sox, 10-6 last Sunday, will be on the mound again with Roosa as his battery mate.

Engineers Heart Victims

German physicians in a report say heart disease is responsible for more than one-third of the deaths of locomotive engineers.

Crystal Gardens to Play Margaretville

Sunday afternoon the Crystal Garden squad will play Margaretville on the latter's diamond. In the mountain team the locals will be meeting one of the best squads in the hills. Rumor has it that Margaretville is strong due to the fact that a number of college players are in the lineup. In fact, nearly all the players are boys from the universities.

So Manager Ashdown said this morning that the boys are looking forward to a good tight battle, but they feel they have met and defeated teams as good as Margaretville earlier in the season. The Paterson Red Sox is a good example of what the Crystal boys can do to teams of good calibre with college boys and ex-major and minor leaguers in the roster.

However, the Crystal Gardens have been in a slump, but Marty Vegerwich pulled them out of the rut last Sunday when they defeated the Poughkeepsie A. A., 16-5. Previous to this five games straight were dropped.

Pan Am Diamond Used.

While Ashdown's men are at Margaretville Sunday, the Irish Block Nine will be engaged in a tilt with Jackson's Antlers on the Pan Am diamond; so the fans will not be left without a ball show while the Crystal Gardens are away.

Port Ewen August 6.

Sunday, August 6, wil be a big day at the Pan Am field, when Port Ewen Firemen will play the Crystal Gardens and bring their drum corps along to perform for the fans before the game.

Final arrangements were made with the Firemen Tuesday night, and their novelty program is expected to attract many fans. Port Ewen besides having a good ball club, has one of the best trained corps in this section. Each year it wins many trophies in competition throughout the valley. This is the first time the Port Ewen organization has made such an appearance here.

West Point Resumes Sunday Polo Games

West Point, July 26.—Resuming Sunday polo games again this summer, the West Point officers' polo team will open its season on picturesque Howze Field here on August 6, according to Major J. B. Thompson, officer in charge. Three teams representing the different branches of the service have been organized and when no outside games are scheduled will play among themselves. Rivalry is high between the teams and all the games will be keenly contested.

Arrangements have been made for convenient parking of cars for the games and parades. All games will be over in ample time for spectators to view the evening parade of the Corps of Cadets.

With the return of Lt. Sammy Walker and Lt. Larry Ladue, the Cavalry team has an edge and is the fastest quartet on the Post. Other teams are composed of Field Artillery officers and officers instructing in the academic departments. A cadet team may also play.

Fail To Keep Eye On Ball.

West Shokan, July 26.—Henry Merrihew, promising high speed third baseman of "Len's Ashokan Copelands", failed recently to keep his unerring eye on the ball when a direct hit over the orb closed out its realm of daylight and left as its mark an honorable black eye. However it takes more than a clip like that to keep the adroit "Hank" (as his high school pals hail him) out of the game.

Defining a Nation

Renan once defined a nation as consisting of those who "have done great things together and desire to do more of them."

FIGHTS LAST NIGHT.

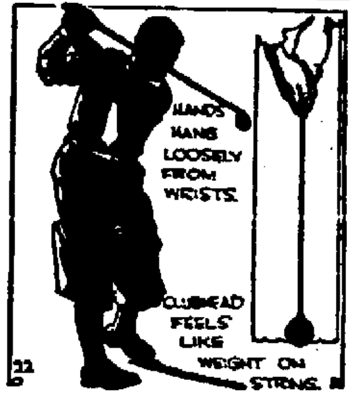
GRAPHIC GOLF



HANDS HANG LOOSELY FROM WRISTS
CLUBHEAD FEELS LIKE WEIGHT ON STRING
22

FLEXIBLE WRISTS

HANDS and wrists play a large part in the golfer's swing. Strong wrists do not necessarily mean a good golfer for these muscles may have sacrificed their suppleness for strength. If, instead of trying to hit with his shoulders or body, the average golfer would think of hitting with wrists and hands he would gain a better picture of just how the clubhead should work. One way to gain the proper feeling of the clubhead coming onto the ball is to loosen the muscles of the wrists until the hands seem to hang loosely from them, apparently ready to fall off. The fingers must grip the club firmly enough, but properly held the clubhead will appear like the weight on the end of a string. In this way the body can be brought gradually into the swing, the hands and wrists waiting to help the clubhead through. One thus gets the feeling of cracking the whip. In the above illustration the dip of the clubhead beyond the horizontal in the backswing shows how flexible Jones' wrists are.

Fish Hibernates Buried Deep in Mud for Snooze

Scientists have discovered a marine fish that hibernates six months of the year in mud.

The discovery was made by a representative of the Zoological Survey of India, at Uttarbagh, near Calcutta. He found the fish buried in mud to a depth of six feet, where it passes the summer season in sleep.

The fish, which is an elongated goby of the genus pseudoapocryptes, lives in creeks, and when they dry up it burrows itself into the mud. It remains comatose, breathing through an air-hole at the top of the burrow.

When brought up the fish was languid, but on being placed in water respiration was resumed, and the fish flapped its gill covers

The significance of the discovery is declared to be that all previous examples of hibernating fish have been of the fresh water type, and this is of the salt water variety. Gobies are essentially coast fishes, and exist in nearly all seas.

Our Friends, the Germs, Aid in Countless Ways

Colds, influenza, diphtheria, even tuberculosis are generally regarded as the work of malevolent germs, and one is apt to regard all the tribe as inimical to man's well-being, says a writer in Tit-Bits Magazine.

The opposite is really true. Germs are one of man's most beneficent agents and assist him in a thousand ways. They are the active factor in yeast, without which bread would be almost uneatable. They give that appetizing flavor to good cheese and their distinctive aromas to wines and spirits. They give tenderness to meat, help in the maturing of tobacco, in the formation of peat and coal, and in the making of linen and leather.

Germ cultures are used by corporations in the purification of sewage—the very opposite process from what one might imagine—and they fertilize the soil, nourish plants, and ripen fruit.

When Johnson Was Impeached

Andrew Johnson was elected Vice President in 1864 and became President upon the death of Lincoln, April 15, 1865. He was impeached in 1868, and his trial before the senate began March 5 and ended in his acquittal on May 26 of that year. He had been spared by one vote, and continued thereafter to sit as President until the inauguration of his successor, Grant, on March 4, 1869.

His Back Broken, Reports for Duty

Atlanta.—Because attendance is one of the strong points in rating efficiency, two members of Atlanta's Naval Reserve battalion went to the annual inspection with a broken back and a broken arm, respectively, but they took part in the three-hour drill and the 1932 attendance record was recorded as 100 per cent.

Glenn Howell and O. M. Webb were the men who forgot their ailments to help the unit's chances to win, for the third consecutive time, the bronze trophy for being the most efficient reserve unit in the United States.

"MOUNTIE" IS SAVED BY HEROIC INDIAN

Struggles Across Frozen Wilds at 40 Below.

The Pas, Man.—How an Indian prisoner with bones broken in an airplane crash crawl through a sub-Arctic blizzard to bring help for his captors was told in this Canadian outpost as an aftermath to the death of Pilot William A. Spence, star northland flyer.

The Indian, Buster Whiteway, was being returned to civilization by an officer of the Canadian Mounted Police to face the white man's laws. The plane, which bore the captive, Corporal R. Graves of the police, an Indian interpreter and Pilot Spence, turned over in a forced landing on the treacherous ice of Moose lake.

The engine was ripped from its base and crushed the pilot to death. The other passengers were seriously injured. The Indian prisoner, his ankle broken in the plunge, crawled away from the wreckage.

Into the blizzard lay liberty, but the wounded brave chose the other course. Details of the Indian's sacrificial decision came to this rail-end only recently. It was learned that Whiteway had dug his way through the snow as the mercury stood at 40 degrees below zero until he attracted Indian fishermen.

They left their lines and ran to aid. Mushers took the word to civilization. A relief plane took off amidst swirling snow.

It bore Dr. N. Trimble of The Pas, and Sergt. P. Rose, fellow officer of the dead pilot. Forced to land in the storm, they fought the last four hours of their journey by sleigh. The doctor gave first aid to the wounded trio and covered the corpse.

As the weather cleared, the return of the wounded and the body was made possible.

Stepfather Who Adopted Girl Now Would Wed Her

New York.—Surrogate John Hetherington in Queens was asked to make a ruling by which a girl will become the stepmother of her two half-brothers. The surrogate decided to hold a public hearing but indicated he is likely to grant the petition.

The girl is Ida Tatzreiter Drugowitz, born twenty-two years ago in Austria. Her mother, Mrs. Polde Tatzreiter, brought her to America and married Leo Drugowitz. There were two children by the Drugowitz marriage.

In June, 1930, Mrs. Drugowitz died. The next month, Drugowitz legally adopted Ida Tatzreiter, the half-sister of his children. Since then, Ida has acted as "mother" to the other children in the Drugowitz home. Recently Drugowitz and his adopted daughter decided to marry.

Drugowitz happened to mention the matter to his lawyer. He was advised to have the adoption abrogated. Papers were filed.

South Dakota Ranchers Fight Cattle Rustlers

Deadwood, S. D.—Cattle rustling again has become prevalent in the Black Hills.

Stockmen have reported losses of 15 to 20 head of cattle from their herds, and some ranchers are missing as many as 30 head.

It is believed that in some instances the animals have been butchered and hauled away on trucks. Others, it was said, have been transported by truck to distant places for disposal.

Fined for Taking Care of Injured Wild Duck

Croton-on-Hudson, N. Y.—Cornelius Playford, of Ossining, is through with lame ducks. Playford saw a disabled wild duck struggling on the shore near Croton Point, captured it, took it home and was nursing it back to health when a game warden arrested him for possessing a wild duck out of season. Playford pleaded guilty before B. Steward Baker, justice of the peace, and was fined $12.50.

Lifer Still Contributes to Support of Family

Boston.—Though Albert L. Harvey, fifty-seven, is serving a life sentence in state prison he contributes regularly to the support of his wife and six children. During the ten years that he has served he has devoted all his spare time to making dolls and toy boats. Prison authorities have sold his handiwork and Harvey has thus earned enough to give his family $1,502.13 within the decade.

Early Edition of Scriptures

ASPIRING CANDIDATES OF OLIVE PREPARE FOR BATTLE

West Shokan, July 26.—As the weeks go by the atmosphere of Olive becomes the more impregnated with the unmistakable odo of political smoke as aspiring candidates for town office wheel their heavy artillery into strategic positions. In the meanwhile a passive interest is being shown toward the election district caucuses when delegates will be chosen to attend the County conventions. Republican selections will be made on Saturday, August 5, the date set for the caucuses. The Democrats too are by no means trailing with their banner in the dust. Consistent rumor has it that Olive's popular 4th term supervisor, Chet Lyons, does not choose to run again this year, and comes right out flat footed and says so. Chet has come to feel increasing business, home, civil and social demands tend to leave extra little time in which to keep his hat in the ring of politics, as much as he might personally desire to.

NEW HURLEY

New Hurley, July 26—William Engleson of New York city spent the week-end with his friend, Mrs. F. Soesman, at her summer home here.

Helena and Winifred Sutton of near Walden spent last Friday afternoon with their grandmother and aunt, Mrs. Isaac Sutton and daughter.

Miss Eleanor Brown returned to her position at the United Hospital for Nurses in Port Chester Sunday after spending a month's vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Brown.

Clifford Countryman made a business trip to Kingston last Saturday.

The directors of the New Hurley Cemetery Association held a meeting at the home of J. H. Denniston last Friday night.

The following people left here Saturday for Chicago and will attend the World's Fair: Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Schoonmaker, Mr. and Mrs. Gerow Schoonmaker, Mr. and Mrs. George Sherwood and son, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Van Wyck and Frank Dwleski.

The C. E. Societies of New Paltz, Gardiner and New Hurley will unite with Clintondale in a union meeting at the Friends Church in Clintondale Sunday evening, July 30, at 8 o'clock.

The following is the report of the fair held on the church grounds last Wednesday evening. The amount given is what was cleared from each booth after all expenses were paid:

Food booth	$ 76.0
Fancy booth	72.0
Drink and ice cream	28.4
Candy	14.5
Grab bag	9.4
Donation from a friend	5.0
Total	$205.4
Paid for music	$ 16.0
Cleared	$189.4

The members of the Young Woman's Club wish to thank all who assisted in making this a success.

Mrs. Gerow Schoonmaker entertained several little folks at her home last Thursday afternoon in honor of her son, Richard's, third birthday. The little folks had a delightful time playing games and later in the afternoon his mother served ice cream and cake. Richard received many nice gifts from his little friends.

The Young Woman's Club will meet at the home of Mrs. Jack Schofield Friday afternoon, August 4.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gulnic and son and daughter of New Paltz spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Philip McCord and family.

Preaching service will be held at the regular time, 11 o'clock, Sunday morning. Sunday school will be held at 10. This will be a preparatory service for Communion, which will be held Sunday, August 6.

Colorado as a Territory

Colorado was organized as a territory on February 28, 1861, with the same boundaries as at present, being made up from parts of the territories of Utah, New Mexico, Kansas and Nebraska. The name given to this territory in the bill as it passed the house was Idaho, but it was changed to Colorado in the senate.

Razing of Delaware Avenue Dwelling

the ground is now being carried by a pipe to the Rondout creek. He estimated that the cellars would be relieved of water within a period of 15 days.

The sand taken from the bank in Wilbur is being used by the Gamiso Construction Company, which has the contract to build the New Paltz-Ireland Corners road.

The matter of curbing South Wall street on both sides was discussed and will be taken up further today when the board members interview the residents of the street. There is a curb on one side, laid by the work relief men but it is understood residents on the other side do not desire a curb. Meeting with the public works commissioners will be Engineer Hallinan and Superintendent Van Keuren.

A report by Engineer Hallinan was made on the Murray street sewer of which residents have been complaining on account of the stench that exists when heavy showers tax the capacity. Mr. Hallinan explained that portions of the sewer were not large enough. However, nothing can be done about enlarging the sewer at this time as the appropriation for maintenance of sewers is almost exhausted, only $2,000 remaining. It was recommended that when the sewer budget is drawn up next year that a sufficient figure be arrived at to take care of fixing the Murray street sewer.

Commissioner E. Frank Flanagan asked the board to pass on a resolution regarding the procuring of federal aid to complete the Boulevard road started by the Work Relief. Mr. Flanagan believes the government will approve the project. If so the work relief money can be used for other projects.

Concerning the playing of Sunday tennis at Forsyth Park, it was stated that Corporation Counsel Chris Flanagan is still working on the matter.

ARDONIA

Ardonia, July 26—Mrs. Della Butler entertained company at her home here Sunday.

A number of local people attended the ball game on the Modena ball diamond when the Plattekill Grangers played the Modena Firemen. The score was 6-3 in favor of the firemen.

Mr. and Mrs. Orville Seymour entertained the Misses Helen and Marian Palmer Sunday.

Mrs. Michael Mulvihill of Walden was a guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ira Hyatt, Sunday.

Mrs. Eugene Paltridge, who has been a guest of her cousin, Mrs. R. Manse, in Bloomingburgh, has returned to her home in this place.

Miss Myrtle Kelder spent Sunday with her father and sister in this place.

The sweltering weather of the past few days was greatly relieved by the fine rain Monday afternoon and evening.

Eber Coy was a business caller in Modena Monday evening.

The Misses Florence and Helena Terwilliger were callers at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ira Hyatt Thursday.

Several cars of gypsies stopped in town for supplies Wednesday.

Eugene Atwood, Sr., was a business caller in Clintondale Thursday evening.

Miss Marian Palmer is in charge of the traveling library of the Clintondale Grange. Books may be obtained from her at any Grange meeting.

John Schoonmaker of Clintondale, who represents the Prudential Life Insurance Company, was a business caller about town last week.

Mrs. Sherman entertained Mr. and Mrs. Howard Ronk of Spring Valley Tuesday.

Miss Ethel Lozier of Savilton, accompanied by Miss Laura Coleman, was a caller in town Thursday.

Dr. Fleming of Gardiner, was testing cows in this place the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Harcourt entertained Sarah Harcourt of East Orange, N. J., one day recently.

Mr. Burger of Pine Bush, was a caller in town Wednesday.

Emmett Hyatt was a caller at the home of his grandfather in Clintondale Sunday.

Ira Hyatt was in Clintondale working on Monday.

Mrs. Dan Ward returned home Sunday, July 23, from the Benedictine Hospital, Kingston.

LEGION JUNIORS BOUND FOR CLINTON

The American Legion junior baseball team, which won the championship of Ulster county, will go to Clinton, near Utica Thursday, leaving the American Legion building on West O'Reilly street at 7 a. m. Ed Coughlin, athletic officer of the Legion, will be in charge of the boys on the trip which will cover 300 miles. The Clinton Legion team recently eliminated Syracuse, one of the strongest in the state.

Sidney Wolven Made Dive.

It was Sidney Wolven, not Sidney Mower, who made the 16 foot dive and entertained the crowd at Van's pool Sunday afternoon during the swimming and diving show. Sid is but six years old.

WEST SHOKAN

West Shokan, July 26—Winners in the waltz contest which formed a conspicuous part in the Saturday night dance program at Colangos' Hall were Andrew Gallasso and Miss Loretta Kraner, who were awarded first prize by the judges on several points and second prize went to Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Kraner. Manager Howard Lucht has promised that another equally pleasing specialty will have its place in the program for next Saturday night.

Mrs. Mary Wheeler of Elmira, is canvassing this locality securing subscriptions to The Farmer's Wife.

Congratulations to Mrs. Early North of North Main street Heights, who celebrated her 70th birthday Monday. In addition to visits by relatives and friends, Mrs. North received a shower of greeting cards and letters. Mrs. North is now showing considerable improvement from her long serious illness. Mrs. North is one of the best loved and most highly esteemed residents in this community in which she has spent her entire lifetime.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Smith of Roselle, N. J., together with her mother, Mrs. Florence Warren, of Newark are spending the week with Mr. and Mrs. Sylvester Jones in West Shokan Heights. "Ed" is a home town boy of past years and during the world war did his bit on Flanders Field as a member of the 101st Anti-Aircraft Machine Gun Battalion, formed wholly or in part from men transferred from the fighting 51st Pioneer Infantry in which there were many Ulster County lads.

The McCullough family of Samsonville are driving a new Chevrolet coach purchased of Supervisor Chester A. Lyons, the Ashokan dealer, turning in the familiar one which they had been driving. Mr. Lyons has been selling Chevrolets to the McCulloughs for nearly the past decade.

Carpenter George Burgher is assisting Jordan Brothers of Brodhead Heights putting down the solid masonry base for their new silo.

No longer will the withering hand of drouth mar the beauty of the flowering rock gardens about genial Judge Henry Winchell's residence at the forks of the Samsonville-Krumville roads. The new artesian well set in the midst of this modern Eden tapped an underground flow at a depth of 94 feet with the flow line rising within 80 feet of the shallow rock surface. For the present an ordinary pitcher pump will do the turn very nicely with details of a more comprehensive force system to be worked out at a later date, perhaps when the electric line becomes available for a convenient hookup. It is a shame that the adorable flower beds in which Mr. and Mrs. Winchell took justifiable pride were gone before the life giving stream became available.

No longer will the rattling plank bridge spanning the High Point brook crossing the mountain road at Brodhead Heights disturb the peaceful slumbers of nearby residents when nocturnal traveling autoists rush by. In its long familiar stead, Commissioner William Jordan has laid a rock-bound steel conduit of sufficient size to carry the flood which sometimes rushes from the mountain slopes, making for another improvement to this much traveled scenic wooded highway.

Chase and Elwyn Davis, West Shokan Heights dairy farmers, have commenced putting down the foundation work for a new milk house. Concrete cow stables also are on the newly outlined program.

The town board will hold its regular monthly session this evening in Olive Bridge.

Mrs. John Marshall, genial mistress of the Olive town clerk's office, led a party of ladies on a hike along the Samsonville road, laughing and chatting merrily as they passed by.

The refreshing rain should stimulate the growth and maturity of High Point and Hooppole Mountain huckleberries, which are being toted off the mountain by the bushel pack baskets full. A small army of pickers made the trip Sunday.

Floyd Terwilliger, widely known Ashokan insurance man, was a local business caller on Tuesday. Mr. Terwilliger is the youngest son of Olive's famous old Democratic war horse, the late Abram B. Terwilliger, who was for a number of terms elected supervisor. However, unlike his illustrious dad, he has never filled a political office, although he is conceded to be by many friends as "a chip off the old block."

Miss Mariam Davis, in training in St. Luke's Hospital, New York city, writes that she recently went swimming in the mighty Atlantic at Long Beach and rode the breakers in a big way. However she feels personally with an air of home pride that the ocean's not half as good as the old familiar Esopus weir where she enjoyed so many pleasant dips before making her home in the big city.

On Thursday, Mr. and Mrs. George B. Saunders, Jr., of Wallkill were entertained at dinner while on a day's visit with Judge and Mrs. Henry Winchell. Mr. Saunders is a nephew of Mrs. Winchell.

Watson Hollow Inn was well patronized Sunday when 40 guests were served with dinner or luncheon.

On Tuesday evening Mrs. Lottie Campbell gave a birthday supper in honor of her daughter, Mrs. Harold Constable. Besides members of the family a number of neighbors were present. Mrs. Campbell is employed as assistant cook at the Watson Hollow Inn.

U. S. DISTRICT COURT, Southern District of New York—In the matter of Samuel Moll and Sonia Moll, individually and as co-partners trading as Samuel and Sonia Moll of the Town of Wawarsing, Ulster County, New York, bankrupt No. 55190.

To the Creditors of said bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that the above bankrupts have applied for a discharge from their debts. Creditors and parties interested are ordered to attend before this Court, in the Post Office Building, Manhattan, New York City, on the 20th day of August, 1933, at 10:30 A. M. (D.S.T.) there to show cause why discharge should not be granted.

Dated, Kingston, N. Y., July 26th, 1933.
WALTER J. MILLER,
Referee in Bankruptcy.

MEADOWS SHOWING NEW GREEN FOLLOWING RAIN

West Shokan, July 26—All nature joins in returning thanks for the wonderful rain which at last has brought to an end the early drouth. Just as on former occasions when everything was drying up and hopes for a drouth saver had all but vanished and then on came the thirst quenching rain. Streams are responding to the run off which in some cases had been dry or nearly so for weeks. However it is doubtful that wells will benefit unless more rain follows.

During the heavy electrical storm early Monday evening a transformer located near the West Shokan Inn was put out of commission, disrupting lighting service for the night on the West Shokan Heights circuit and other adjacent connections. Repairs were made by one of the Central Hudson trouble crews about noon Tuesday.

The meadows are already showing a decided new green along with sunburned lawns. Just great growing weather in general with gardens, potatoes, corn fields and late grain sowings like buckwheat responding in leaps and bounds.

"Dame Schools"

As early as 1625 girls were taught the rudiments of English in colonial institutions described as "dame schools." Usually such a school was simply the living room of a private home, adapted by a widow or an energetic spinster for educational purposes; and the "dame school" was very often a target for jokes from skeptical and unfeeling citizens.

Arctics' Most Advanced

The Lapps of the Far North of Europe, who have the advantage of the gulf of winter warmth caused by the Atlantic drifts and the warm southwesterly winds, are the most advanced of Arctic peoples.

BARONESS LEVI IS SURPRISE TENNIS THREAT

Seabright, N. J., July 26 (AP)—Baroness Maud Levi, of New York, continued to be the sensation of the classic Seabright invitation tennis tournament today by conquering sixth-seeded Virginia Rice, of Boston in straight sets, 6-4, 10-8.

Unseeded and little known outside of the Metropolitan district where she won four minor titles this season, the Baroness added Miss Rice, ninth in the National ranking, to the victim list that yesterday acquired the name of Carolin Babcock, of Los Angeles, seeded second and ranked third in the United States.

Rain Mars Hikes To Mountain Tops

On Monday afternoon, July 22, Scouts and leaders from Camp Half Moon left camp to climb Blackhead Mountain. Cars and a truck took the boys to the foot of the mountain where they were met by their guide. Although the day was warm and several showers were encountered the hike was made in four hours, the Scouts arriving at the top at 7 in the evening. Fires were built and supper cooked after which the boys constructed beds and lean-tos of balsam and spruce twigs. Shortly after retiring the Scouts witnessed a tremendous display of thunder and lightning which was followed by an all-night rain.

During the night several Scouts encountered porcupines which were so bold that one boy awoke and found a "porky" sitting on him.

The boys arose at sunrise and after breakfast cooked Scout style started the descent which was quite precipitous. The boys reached bottom at 10 and were transported back to camp.

Everyone reported that although the trip was a bit damp the hike was a very interesting one.

The Cowboy division of Camp Half Moon undertook a hike to the summit of Round Top Mountain on Monday afternoon. They left camp at 2:30 p. m. and because of the heat hiked slowly to Cairo. From there they proceeded by gradual stages to the top of the mountain, arriving at about 6:15 p. m.

The beautiful view from the crest of the mountain was slowly being obscured by the clouds when they arrived so immediate preparations were made for supper and shelter. Each Scout group prepared its own supper and after the long hike everyone did the meal justice. Some picked fresh blueberries, of which there were an abundance, to help fill the empty stomachs.

After supper beds were prepared in as sheltered places as could be found. Then a large council fire was built and just as the group were in the midst of "Home on the Range" the rain broke and everyone ran for cover. The rain came in torrents and, despite precautions, blankets were soon soaked. After the rain had slackened somewhat everyone joined in to make a large fire by which to dry out wet clothing and blankets.

Meanwhile the boys had sighted the council fire of the group who had climbed Blackhead Mountain. Some attempts were made to signal but the rain prevented any possible success.

At 12 the group decided not to wait until morning but to return at once. So the camp fire was extinguished and the procession began its long trip to Camp Half Moon, arriving at 3 o'clock in the morning.

Every Scout was tired but cheerful and on Tuesday all had enough dry blankets in which to sleep comfortably.

All the boys and leaders in the Scout Camp are looking forward to the visit of the Service Clubs on Thursday afternoon and evening, July 27. Reservations have been made for at least 150 men. The Cairo Exchange Club, which is cooperating with the camp, is very enthusiastic and are doing everything possible to make the outing for the Service Club men a huge success.

"WILLOW TREE" WILL PLAY THROUGH JULY 30

Edwin O'Hanlon, manager of the Maverick Theatre, Woodstock, reports continued requests for an extended run of "The Willow Tree," written and directed by Beurimo, and produced in the Open Air Theatre at the Maverick.

For this reason, it has been decided to run "The Willow Tree" through next week-end, up to and including Sunday, July 30, with another popular-priced matinee for children on Saturday afternoon.

Capacity crowds were accommodated at the Saturday and Sunday night performances, and many distinguished visitors were present, prominent among whom were Mr. and Mrs. Winston, with their guests Lord and Lady Hastings, and Lady Faith; Mrs. Ralph Radcliffe Whitehead, Mrs. Quackenbush, Mrs. Birge Harrison, Mrs. George Bellows, Ward Morehouse, dramatic critic of the New York Sun, and many well-known artists and musicians.

The supporting cast of distinguished players includes: Carrol Ashburn, Richard Bonneville, Wells Richardson, Robert Elwyn, Stephen Sands, Gardner Watkins, Frances von Bernuth, Harriot Marshal and Marcella Swanson. Mr. O'Hanlon announces the following production will be that sensational mystery thriller, "The Cat and the Canary."

ASHOKAN.

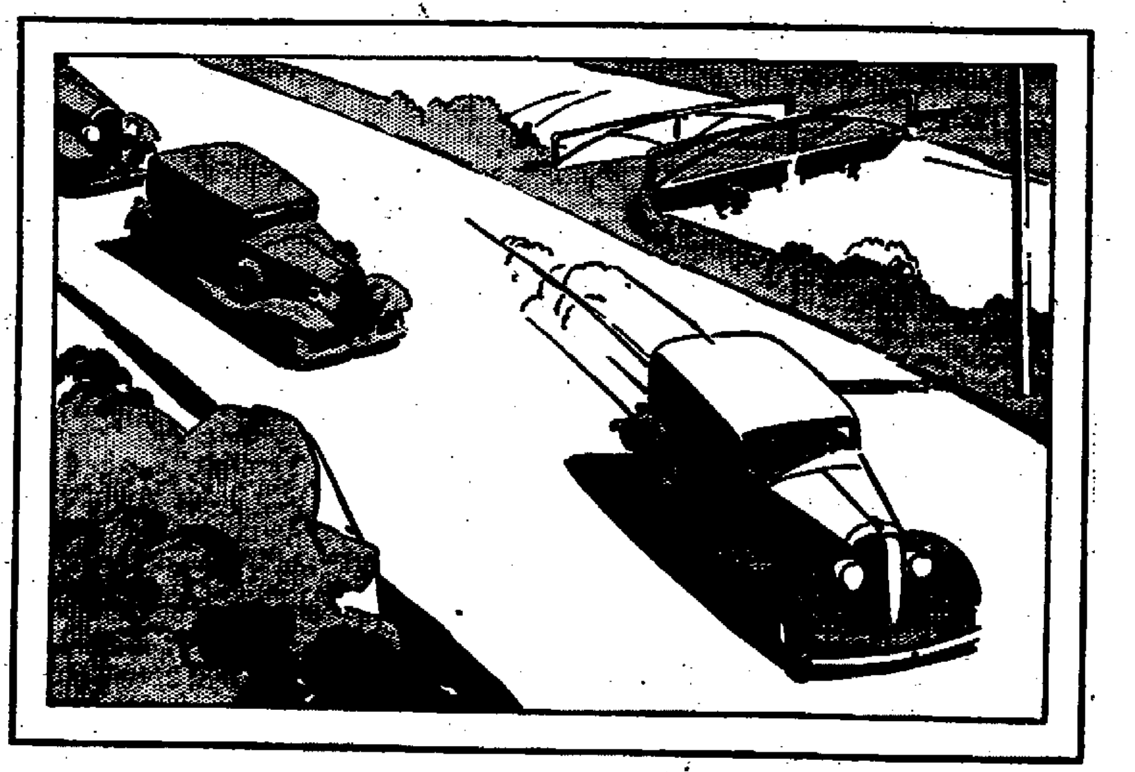
STEP OUT
in the Style Leader!



WHEN you go out in a new Oldsmobile, you not only step out in style—but you also step out ahead! For style is but half the story of Oldsmobile leadership. Oldsmobile performance is equally outstanding. Few cars, at any price, will challenge an Oldsmobile on the road—and it is doubtful whether any can provide more delightful performance. Won't you prove this today—at the wheel of an Oldsmobile? Fifteen minutes is really all you'll need!

An amazing book—"How to Test the Performance of a Motor Car"—has been written by the testing engineers at the General Motors Proving Ground. With this book, you can judge any car's performance quickly and accurately. It's free—and you have never seen anything like it! Come in and get your free copy today. It is unbiased—does not advertise Oldsmobile.
